RECITALS OVER THE AIR A HARVARD OFFERING

E. POWER BIGGS WILL PLAY

Organ in Germanic Museum to Be Heard Every Sunday Morning from Coast to Coast Over Columbia Broadcasting System.

Announcement is made of an important series of organ recitals which will give radio listeners throughout the United States the opportunity to hear E. Power Biggs on the classic Aeolian-Skinner organ in the Germanic Museum of Harvard University at Cambridge, Mass. The recitals are to be broadcast over the network of the Columbia Broadcasting System and will be played every Sunday morning from 9:15 to 9:45 Eastern war time. They are to be offered over stations from coast to coast.

The initial recital in the series took place Sept. 20.

On Oct. 4 the program will include the Handel Concerto 13, the "Cuckoo and Nightingale," Variations by Haydn, several Bach chorale preludes and the "St. Anne" Fugue of Bach.

The first ten recitals of the series are to be presented by Harvard University and are made possible by a special gift from Mrs. Elizabeth Coolidge, the patron of music. Mr. Biggs is the recitalist at the invitation of Harvard. The programs are to be of a varied character, but on each one are included one of the Preludes and Fugues of Johann Sebastian Bach and the entire ten recitals will include all of the "great" Preludes and Fugues. Another special feature that has been arranged by Mr. Biggs is the first performance of a new Sonata for organ by Richard Arnell. This will be played Oct. 25.

After the ten recitals under Harvard auspices the series is to be continued as one of the weekly programs of the Columbia network.

The Germanic Museum has been taken over by the army as a school for chaplains, but this will not interfere with the organ broadcasts.

Ever since the completion of the organ of classic design in the Germanic Museum by G. Donald Harrison, president of the Aeolian-Skinner Company, the instrument has been of pronounced interest to organists throughout the country. By virtue of his recitals on this organ and the records he has made there the name of Mr. Biggs has been closely linked with the museum and its organ.

TORONTO CONVENTION SETS CANADA RECORD

DR. PEAKER AGAIN PRESIDENT

Toronto Center Requested by Other C. C. O. Centers at Close of Two Days of Recitals and Papers to Repeat Program in 1943.

BY MAITLAND FARMER, F.R.C.O.

The annual convention of the Canadian College of Organists took place in Toronto, Ont., Sept. 1 and 2.

The convention opened Tuesday morning, Sept. 1, at the headquarters in the Toronto Conservatory of Music, with a council meeting which was presided over by the chairman, Dr. Charles Peaker. At this meeting the registration of members and guests continued apace, showing early that a record attendance could be expected. At 12:30 the council adjourned to the Alexandra Palace Hotel for luncheon, where they were the guests of the Toronto Center under the chairmanship of W. Wells Hewitt of St. James' Cathedral.

The afternoon session consisted of a drive of several miles into the country to the Guild of All Arts, a delightful spot on the lake shore. Here a paper was read by Dr. Charles Peaker on "The Organist in Music and Society." Following this the meeting was thrown open and various topics of vital interest to the members were discussed, among which were problems of improvisation, suitability and otherwise of certain wedding music, general service music and the ever interesting subject of organists' remuneration. A very pleasant afternoon tea was enjoyed in the beautiful surroundings of this delightful place.

The next event took place in the evening at St. Paul's Church, Bloor Street, where a recital by Maitland Farmer was heard. As the recitalist was punished sufficiently by the heat and the responsibility of the undertaking he can hardly be expected to give himself the extra pain of commenting on it in this article.

Wednesday morning dawned with weather as magnificent as on the preceding day. As all business of the council had been concluded on Tuesday, the usual council meeting was not held. Therefore the first event was the annual general meeting, at which business matters were discussed and war-time conditions and prospects provided the main topics.

The afternoon was devoted to a recital at the Eaton Auditorium, in which there is a magnificent Casavant instrument, played by Harvey Robb, principal of the Western Ontario Conservatory of Music and organist and choirmaster of First-St. Andrew's United Church, London, Ont. A large audience attended, consisting not only of convention members but of the general public and many of Mr. Robb's old friends and acquaintances in the city. The program, which was played with all his old assurance and fire, consisted of: Symphony No. 1 in D minor, Vienne; "Chanson" and Canzona, Edward Shippen Barnes; "Divertimento" and Fanfare, Percy Whitlock; Chorale, "Now Rejoice, All Ye Christians," Bach; Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor, Bach. At the conclusion of the recital, afternoon tea in the round room provided a pleasant period of sociability and relaxation at which the recitalist received many congratulations.

At 6:30 a record crowd of hungry organists and friends invaded the palatial Granite Club, the scene of the convention's closing event. Dr. Charles Peaker, the president, introduced the guest speaker, Professor Watson Kirkconnell of McMaster University, Hamilton, and we realized only too well how lucky we were, for Professor Kirkconnell made no attempt to deliver an ordinary speech, and right at the beginning said that he felt sure that what his audience wanted to hear was a poem or two from his famous book, "The Flying Bull." For more than three-quarters of an hour this astounding personality recited without hesitation four of his poems—"The Clerk's Tale of Usquedunk, the Frog King," "The Bus-driver's Tale of the Magyar Violinist," "The Butcher's Tale of the Fort Henry Tunnel" and "The Drover's Tale of the Flying Bull." To those who knew these works it was a rare experience to hear the author interpret them and to those who were not familiar with them came the decision to read them without delay. At the conclusion and in response to the chairman's invitation for anecdotes, we were treated to another hilarious half-hour to which Dr. Healey Willan, Sir Ernest MacMillan and various other humorists contributed.

It was a matter of pride to the Toronto Center that it was unanimously requested by the other local centers that the whole convention should be repeated in Toronto next year. This, of course, depends on much, but we were glad to think not only that this convention established a record, in spite of the war conditions, but that it was so thoroughly appreciated.

Associate diplomas were presented to the following: Hazel R. Brillinger, Clifford C. McAree, Kenneth W. Scott, Harold F. Arndt and Frederick L. McLeanon.

Following is a list of the elected officers and council members for the season 1942-43:

- President—Dr. Charles Peaker, F.R.C.O., Toronto.

- Registrar of Examinations—F. C. Silvester, Toronto.
- Secretary—Maitland Farmer, F.R.C.O., Toronto.
- Treasurer—H. G. Langlois, B.A., Mus. B., Toronto.

The foregoing are ex-officio members of the council.

Council members were elected as follows:

- Brantford—A. G. Merriman, A.R.C.O., and H. D. Jerome.
- Hamilton—Eric Rollinson, F.R.C.O., George Veary, A.R.C.O., and Egerton Boyce.
- Kitchener—Glenn Kruspe, Mus.B., and Edgar Merkel.

- Toronto—Alfred E. Clarke, T. J. Crawford, Mus.B., F.R.C.O., Sir Ernest MacMillan, Mus.D., F.R.C.O., and Healey Willan, Mus.D., F.R.C.O.

The following program was played Sept. 1 before a large audience at St. Paul's Anglican Church, Toronto, by the organist of the church, Maitland Farmer, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M.: Tuba Tune, Norman Cocker; "On Hearing the First Cuckoo in Spring," Delius; Capriccio, John Ireland; Carol, Percy Whitlock, Toccata and Fugue in D minor, Bach; Celtic Melody, O'Connor-Morris; Scherzo (Symphony 5), Guilmant; "May Night," Palmgren; Postlude, Norman Gilbert; Scherzetto and Berceuse, "Feux Follets," "Clair de Lune" and "Carillon de Westminster," Vierne.

The excellent organ in St. Paul's Church was heard to advantage in this brilliantly-played program. The numbers were varied and seemed to be all well chosen to interest both organists and laymen. A grand climax was reached in the playing of Vierne's "Carillon de Westminster."

As the main account of the convention was written by Maitland Farmer as secretary of the College, no review was included of his own recital. This was one of the outstanding features of the convention and, therefore, we are pleased to add these words of comment and appreciation.

Plans of Philadelphia Choruses.

The Philadelphia Bach Festival Chorus, James Allan Dash conductor, will participate in the annual Bach festival at St. James' Church early in May, 1943. Twelve cantatas, several never before given in Philadelphia, the Mass in F major and two motets will be performed. The Brahms Festival Chorus, also conducted by Mr. Dash, will participate in a festival of modern English choral music to be held in Philadelphia early in March. Works of Elgar, Holst, Vaughan Williams and others will be sung.

Color and Ensemble

Color, in a combination of tone, is decided by the distance between the lowest and highest pitch represented. The sound of an eight-foot and a two-foot stop will retain its two-octave character through the addition of the Nazard and four-foot stops, even though the character of the sound is greatly modified. The essential color is changed only when the pitch range is increased.

The color is clearest when the two extreme pitches only are sounded. Each addition of pitch or stop within these limits brings the quality more near to "normal tone."

So in registration involving Mixture or Mutation tone, because of the pitch distance represented, great changes may be made in the size and effect of the combination without altering the essential color.

Set the color by the extreme pitches, then regulate the quantity of tone from within those limits.

The Baltimore, Saginaw and Marty organs are installed in chambers, each division under separate expression, with the pedal evenly divided. The Los Angeles organ will be installed on a balcony, swell-box construction being employed, with all stops under one expression, the pedal open being non-expressive.

The Los Angeles organ has no super or sub couplers because all stops are made playable at various pitches. This organ was designed by Raymond Hill.

In cases where there is a second diapason the parent rank is an octave, voiced as an octave. In other words, by adding the bass to the octave another diapason is made available.

Mixtures in the Los Angeles organ are drawn from very soft ranks so as not to disturb the ensemble.

The Marty Indian Mission is in charge of the Benedictine Fathers, who desired an organ with good build-up, incorporating ranks most suitable for the accompaniment of chant. Attention is directed to the flexibility of the Saginaw great organ.

In some instances the lieblich gedeckt is considered part of the swell and in others the builders included it with the pedal.

Status of Organist in Music and Society Convention Subject

[The following is the text of a paper presented at the convention of the Canadian College of Organists in Toronto, Ont., in September, by the president of the College.]

By DR. CHARLES PEAKER, F.R.C.O.

What is an organist? And, indeed, why is an organist?

There are "movie" organists, private organists, concert organists, radio organists and borough organists, but the great majority of us are church organists. On the side we may examine eyes, ears, noses and throats, build organs or houses, run conservatories, cut hair, direct insurance divisions, sing or lead orchestras, play the piano or dabble in science, like Sir James Jeans. With Herschel, astronomy may interest us; or we may write poetry as the organist Milton did. We can elect to compile textbooks like Kitson's, or compose motets after Healey Willan; it is highly improbable that we shall do both, however. Very few of us have committed skillful murder like the cathedral organist John Jasper (who probably buried his victim under the church in which he played) and none of us has ever compared with Bach in any particular at all.

One thing we all have in common—we put on our best clothes once a week and go to church to play the organ and lead the singing. On those occasions we have the honor of leading great choral efforts when folks who never sing at other times stand up together and do it on a grand scale. This is probably our greatest moment. During the week we all rehearse these hymns with a picked body of singers, and if there is time we may try over an anthem or two, and perhaps a cantata.

At the top of our profession is the cathedral organist who does these things twice a day and who lives in the precincts where his predecessors lived before him. He plays on grand instruments, in fabrics that have seen a great deal of history roll over their heads; you can see where the vicars choral of the thirteenth century have left their marks on his carved choir stalls. We are, in short, because the faithful have always assembled to worship and have felt that music was an integral and necessary part of that worship. Formerly we had no music except the voices, but eventually instruments invaded the sanctuary again, as they did in the time of David, and when the center of gravity, musically speaking, changed to Germany, we find organs in all the churches and better men than we are playing them. Their major prophets were Bach and Handel, and experts tell us they never wrote a bar of unaccompanied music, so far had the trend swung away from Palestrina. When Johann Sebastian was away on tour and free to hear someone else play a service he was delighted when the organist developed his improvised fugue logically (I have a sneaking notion that some of the weaker brethren must have improvised that fugue a few times during the previous week). It is good to remember that our own Wesley did this sort of thing very well, as witness his performance of Mendelssohn when he (Wesley) was an old man of 75.

Thus we are here today as a body of craftsmen because the Almighty has planted music so deeply in our nature that public worship without it is the exception. Granted this premise, the labors of the great composers inspired by holy texts and the evolution of the organ itself by devoted workers become the inevitable sequel.

Thus the twentieth century finds us with two major responsibilities—the training of the choir and the playing of the organ. This last observation does not apply to the Christian Science churches, where they have no choirs, or to the Quakers, who do not employ organs. To accomplish these twin tasks well, a man should be a fair soloist on the organ and he must certainly govern it in such a manner that he can accompany decently, and this may necessitate some antinomy in score reading and transposition. We can take it for granted that God has given him a good ear and that he has taken pains to better it, and we hope he has a pleasant personality, so that his relations with choir, congregation and clergy shall be agreeable. Added to this there must be a little stubbornness in his composition, or he will fall into the error of trying to please everyone and thus satisfying nobody. In point of fact, he is in his post to render an acceptable offering to the Almighty, rather than to tickle the ears of the congregation, but common-sense tells us that a man who doesn't keep his choir reasonably in tune is doing neither one thing nor the other. His colleague who cannot by any means get the right notes in the accompaniments is in the same unhappy position.

As regards the authority of the organist, I take it that we send our representatives to Parliament in accord with our general principles, and we expect them to use their own brains when they get there. We pay our doctors and dentists to treat us, but we do not tell them how to do their business. Thus in our case, too, the old adage "He who pays the piper calls the tune" does not obtain either. I shall not touch on the question of music committees in these remarks, but I will timidly venture the opinion that big business men can be very obtuse about questions of ordinary psychology. We are, each in his own kingdom, the arbiters of taste to many people. We are the "general practitioners" of music—men who know something of singing and theory, have a smattering of orchestral lore and can really play the organ. Incidentally, we generally do a better job of conducting sitting down, but we are supposed to be intelligible when we stand up to do it.

Now this man I have been postulating should be highly honored among his brethren, the violinists, the pianists, the singers and so forth. Is he? I once asked an eminent pianist what he thought of the organ and he said he didn't know because he had never heard it played well. George Meredith has this in one of his novels: "An organist an accomplished man! Lady Gosstre repeated Adela's words. 'Well I suppose it is possible, but it rather upsets one's notions, does it not?'"

Sir Henry Wood said he could never get the organist to leave off with the rest. I am afraid that of all musicians we are the ones who take the most liberties with the cardinal property of music, rhythm. I can say this because it was for long my own besetting sin. I hope I have slain the dragon, but I am not sure. We introduce pauses while we find stops or turn pages and we alone dare to follow a master work with a few choice chords of our own in no known metrical system and in several keys.

I have often wondered why men who really can play a recital do so much inane improvising in the service instead of giving their audiences something real. I always remember what a treat it was to go to the Timothy Eaton Church and hear Dr. MacMillan perform. However, we have excuses—we never own our instruments and we couldn't transport them if we did, and when we go abroad we never meet with two alike. We must spend long hours in cold churches to keep up our technique. But we have our moments. We can play heavenly preludes from the "little organ book" to comfort the mourners at funerals and we come out very strong at weddings. The great church festivals are ours, and sometimes we unite our forces and perform oratorios.

On the whole, then, ours is an honored lot and a fairly remunerative one, and when we do well we are thanked and congratulated. We do our work in dignified surroundings and with a measure of propriety and decorum around us and we meet the best people in their best clothes and in their best frame of mind. I dare vouch that there is no organist here who has not made lifelong friends among the people he met in church. We hear the greatest literature read, and if we serve the church for thirty years we are exposed to about 2500 sermons. A man who can listen to that much preaching without some effect upon him is no doubt a fool. What of the minister who has listened to an equal number of anthems? Unlike him we can change our church and even our denomination fairly freely and I dare say that a Baptist church would rather have a first-rate Presbyterian organist than a Baptist who is only mediocre.

This brings me naturally to the question of which is preferable—a good organist who does not do the choir work very well or a first-rate choral man who "gets by" on the organ. I plump for the man who is tolerably good in both capacities, but if I am compelled to answer the question as I have propounded it then I believe the average church would select a man who was a choirmaster first and an organist afterward. At all events, if he is a musician and wishes to be regarded as such he must work to keep up his technique in both spheres.

Every time we play a fugue we haven't practiced we give the composer and the fugal form another black eye, and perhaps this is the reason no one listens to our postludes. Certainly no pianist or violinist would ever get a serious hearing who relied as much on his instrument to help him through as do we. Any fool and an organ can produce a large and imposing noise, and it requires no special skill to perform a sequence of melting chords on a smoothly-voiced vox humana with tremulant. When we present a larger proportion of the master works Bach, Handel, Mendelssohn and Brahms have left us for the organ, not to mention the modern English and French schools, and when we do a better class of choral work, then we shall interest other musicians more than we do at the moment. When we perform Schaeffer, Shelley, Barnby and Simper we cannot be expected to be taken seriously.

Socially we have much to gain when we can regiment ourselves and, like the medical men, establish more uniformity in our standards. We have all seen cases in which organists have been treated unjustly by churches, but I am afraid it is still more common to see churches tolerating incompetence and egotism for an amazing time. There is a suspicion that we are inclined to be square-toed and touchy over our prerogatives, and perhaps at times we are compelled to be so. There are also those among us who profess to believe that the laity cannot discriminate between good and bad; these are the men who never practice and make a proud boast of it. Many a man in the history of government has held the same easy view of public opinion and has at length been thrust forth ignominiously.

Aside altogether from artistic integrity, I think we shall be more acceptable socially when we take a livelier interest in things outside our own province. When we look at medicine we think of doctors, like Conan Doyle and Oliver Wendell Holmes, and we must not forget Dr. W. G. Grace, the famous cricketer.

I mentioned John Milton at the start of my discourse and I shall finish with one ecstatic sentence from his works which crystallizes the whole thing and redeems my prosaic utterances: But let my due feet never fail To walk the studious cloister's pale And love the big embowed roof With antic pillars massy proof, And storied windows richly light Casting a dim religious light: There let the pealing organ blow To the full-voiced quire below In service high, and anthems clear As may with sweetness through mine ear Dissolve me into ecstasies And bring all heaven before mine eyes.

DOCTOR OF MUSIC DEGREE FOR FRANCIS S. MOORE

The Boguslawski College of Music in Chicago has conferred the degree of doctor of music on Francis S. Moore, organist and director at the First Methodist Church of Oak Park and one of the best-known organists of Chicago. Dr. Moore before going to Oak Park was for more than thirty years at the First Presbyterian Church of Chicago, where he succeeded Clarence Eddy. He is a member of the faculty of the Boguslawski school.

Robert W. Glover at Camp Wolters.

Robert W. Glover of Chicago is now at Camp Wolters in Texas, undergoing basic training. On Sept. 20 he began work as the organist for the Lutheran service at the post. He is also attending a class for army chapel organists, conducted by Corporal Thomas Weaver, a graduate of Peabody Conservatory and a former pupil of Dr. Clarence Dickinson. Mr. Glover received the master of science degree from the University of Illinois last summer after study with Russell Hancock Miles.

Music Therapy New Field of Opportunity Open to the Organist

By HOMER WHITFORD, F.A.G.O.

Three years ago the writer was asked to take the organ and choir for the Sunday chapel service at McLean Hospital, Waverly, Mass., a suburb of Boston. McLean Hospital is a part of the Massachusetts General Hospital and provides for the treatment and care of persons suffering from nervous or mental diseases. The psychiatrist-in-chief is connected with the department of hygiene at Harvard University. There are about 250 patients, housed in attractive buildings scattered about a beautifully landscaped hilltop resembling a college campus and offering a fine view of surrounding communities.

Shortly after assuming my duties as organist I asked for the director's permission to organize a music program for the hospital itself under the department of occupational therapy. This program has been developed until at the present time it includes:

1. Music appreciation, with four organ recitals a year, solo, choral and instrumental concerts by outside musicians and illustrated talks by the director of music. The administration building contains an auditorium used for concerts, "movies," dances and other events which include the entire hospital family. The music rooms of the men's and women's occupational therapy buildings are available for more intimate and less formal occasions.

2. Group performance by the patients themselves, with singing of carols, folk-songs and general requests, ensemble playing, a toy symphony and informal concerts by music students for the other patients. We hope next year to have a "real" orchestra made up of patients and members of the staff.

3. Individual study, with piano, song coaching, composition and occasional string and wind instruments.

4. The McLean Chorus, consisting only of men and women nurses and other staff members, which gives an annual concert, and appears at Christmas and Easter, and at the baccalaureate service held in connection with the three-year course in psychiatric and general nursing maintained by the hospital. These services are held in Eliot Memorial Chapel, in which there is a good organ of moderate size.

I can say truthfully that I have never had a more interesting and rewarding musical experience than in my work at McLean. The doctors and other specialists have been very helpful and have smoothed the way many times when things looked difficult to a layman. Most of the patients are people much like ourselves, but who have become over-tired nervously, depressed or temporarily unbalanced by situations which they do not understand. Many are guests of the hospital for a comparatively short time and leave either completely cured or greatly improved. Others come for an indefinite stay, either voluntarily or by commitment, and are usually able to participate in occupational activities. A few are long-time residents for the purpose of receiving better care and more personal attention than they might receive at a state institution or in their own homes. These individuals are sometimes able to do surprisingly good work in music.

Our program has proved valuable in many ways. Listening to carefully selected compositions has been helpful in lifting depression and quieting elation. Individual or group performance provides an emotional outlet, escape from introversion in a job well done, and the social gain of recreational activity in association with others.

The real value of all occupational therapy, of course, consists in what is done by the patients, not in what is done for them. However, the development of interest, when not already present, must come first, and the appreciation programs often serve that purpose.

For some reason there are many musicians among our patients. (Someone has said that all artists are schizophrenics.) Most of these welcome an opportunity to continue musical work. Music is one activity which our patients can carry on after arrival at the hospital when so many normal activities are reduced because of change of environment and necessity for treatment. Others have done nothing with music since they were quite young and often enjoy continuing from where they left off.

During the last three years the patients have shown a marked interest in both performing and listening to music. During the season just closing there have been fourteen men and twenty-four women doing individual work, sixteen group performance events and twenty-six music appreciation programs. It seems to me that organists, both by their broad musical background and experience in working with large and small groups of people of all ages, are particularly well fitted for this type of work. I have had no special training in the field in which I am occupied three days a week at the hospital, but have benefited greatly from reading and from conferences with our psychiatrists and the other occupational therapists. I may have got off to a good start by having had both a father and a grandfather who were physicians and also amateur musicians—perhaps there is some music therapy in my blood stream.

We have investigated the music programs of similar institutions and have tried, frequently by trial and error, to find activities best suited to our own needs. In my humble opinion there has been a bit of apple-sauce written on the subject of music therapy. We are asked to believe that under the influence of certain compositions hardened criminals have become saints and that even cows and hens have increased the quantity and quality of their output! There is no doubt, however, that this is a growing field in the country as a whole, and while good work is being done in hospitals and other institutions, it is probable that the possibilities of music therapy greatly exceed present accomplishment. Our armed forces, industrial and merchandising establishments have long been aware of the lift to efficiency given by the right music at the right time. I believe that study, enthusiasm and common sense will achieve great things in this direction in the not-too-distant future.

ELIZABETH THAMES PIERCE IS NOW IN SAN ANTONIO, TEX.

Mrs. Elizabeth Thames Pierce, who has been teacher of piano and organ at Trinity University and organist of the Central Presbyterian Church of Waxahachie, Tex., for the last six years, is now in San Antonio, to which city the school has moved, and she will continue her work there. To mark the close of her activities in Waxahachie Mrs. Pierce gave a vespers recital at her church Aug. 30 and played the following program: "Now Let Us Sing with Joy" and "Rejoice Now, Christian Souls," Bach-Glenn; "I Stand with One Foot in the Grave," Bach-Grace; Prelude and Fugue in D major, Bach; "Echo," Yon; Toccata, Reger; "Mist" E. W. Doty; "Vom Himmel hoch," Edmundson. After the recital the congregation of the church held a reception in honor of the members of the Trinity University faculty.

Mrs. Pierce received her bachelor's degree and diploma in music from the Mississippi State College for Women and her master of music degree from Louis-

MODERN MAGIC...at fingertip!

As one operates the Wicks combination system, a thought could well come to mind that some invisible force moves the tablets or knobs. When the pistons are pushed, the stop controls move silently and automatically, by electricity, at the organist's bidding. Movement of the console stops is by remote control, the setting being done at the keyboard.

The accompanying illustration shows the setting or recording mechanism. It is designed to give lasting service. Steel mountings and laminated fibre eliminate fragile parts. Atmospheric variations, or changes in temperature will not affect its faithful operation. This apparatus is usually installed in the organ chamber or casework.

Manual, master, or general pistons, are all available in a Wicks.

NOEHRN WINS HIGH PRAISE AT GRAND RAPIDS RECITAL

Robert Noehren, who was recently appointed organist and choirmaster of the Fountain Street Baptist Church in Grand Rapids, Mich., played a brilliant recital there before an audience of over 600 Sept. 20. Mr. Noehren's program included the Prelude, Fugue and Chaconne by Buxtehude; "From God Shall Naught Divide Me" and "Fugue a La Gigue," Bach; the Reubke Sonata, the Sketch in

D flat by Schumann and "Carillon de Westminster," by Vierne. The Grand Rapids Herald said in its review of the recital that it "must have delighted all who had a part in bringing Mr. Noehren here," and added: "He proved himself both a brilliant and scholarly organist, a skilled program builder who presented a varied enough program to appeal to all listeners in his large audience, a musician whose interpretations are as impressive as his masterly technique."

A reception for Mr. and Mrs. Noehren was held in the church parlors after the recital. The program announced a festival of choral music to be given at the church under the direction of the new organist and choirmaster late in the autumn.

Warden Hawkins Speaks to Organists in Detroit on Service Playing Needs

Warner M. Hawkins, Mus.D., F.A.G.O., addressed the Eastern Michigan Chapter in Detroit Sept. 15. This meeting, marking the opening of the A.G.O. year, was held in the parish-house of St. John's Episcopal Church.

Speaking on the value of Guild examinations, Dr. Hawkins pointed out how the practical work would improve service playing.

"Many a great organist," said he, "who can play a Vienne symphony to perfection does not play a service any too well." This was so because service playing requires something more than mere virtuosity.

Dr. Hawkins then went through all the items of the test at the organ one by one. As to transposition he said that it was often necessary, even imperative, to transpose an aria or solo passage of an anthem to suit certain particular voices.

"Many a soprano," he said, "who has an abominable high C may have a perfect B; and why insist on her singing the C when the B will be ever so much better?" "Naturally," he added, "transposition isn't something that is acquired overnight; it is something requiring constant attention."

This brought up the subject of modulatory improvisation, a type of improvisation highly necessary in the service. The necessity for this was declared to be only too obvious. Ending an anthem in B flat and then continuing with a hymn in D would create a disagreeable feeling were not the transition smoothed over by a suitable modulatory improvisation.

"Once," Dr. Hawkins related, "I was in a church where a big procession was under way. It was obvious that the choirs would never reach the chancel before the end of the hymn. So the organist briefly improvised after each stanza. At one point in his interludes he improvised toward a key a step lower, and, to rest the voices of his singers, had them sing the next two verses in the lower key, only to bring them back up for the last verse. This was done so smoothly that hardly anyone noticed it, yet it created an effect that was electrifying."

Then came up improvisation in a more extended form. Speaking on the point that the only real prelude is an improvisation around the tune of the hymn to be sung, Dr. Hawkins gave a brief demonstration of the improvisatory possibilities of "Laudes Domini."

Finally the speaker asked the dean of the chapter to submit a few basses and melodies for instant harmonization and some modulatory problems, all of which were worked out forthwith to everybody's satisfaction.

A short discussion followed, the gist of which was that more meetings of similar nature were necessary to enlighten possible candidates in work procedures before taking the A.G.O. examinations.

Guests of honor included I. D. Callahan, music editor of The Detroit Free Press, and Bendetson Netzorg, piano virtuoso, composer and pedagogue.

IN THE GUILD

A short time ago mention was made in this column of a choral festival which might be held in New York in June, 1943. It now appears that this festival will take place—at least tentative plans have been made and information given out is as follows:

The proposed music festival will take place from June 1 through June 4 in New York City. It will consist of choral programs and organ recitals.

The annual Ascension Day (four choirs) service will be a part of the festival and will fall on June 3. A service at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine will feature massed boy choirs. A service at the Riverside Church will feature massed Protestant mixed choirs and there will be a representative program in a Roman Catholic church.

There will be daily organ recitals through the four-day festival period. At the conclusion of the festival a dinner will be held and it is possible we may have Leo Sowerby to deliver an address on this occasion.

It is hoped that in other sections of the country organ and choral festivals will be held. Since it is not possible to have our scheduled national convention, we must make our own music at home, so to speak. So plan now to do your part in helping your chapter—your organization—carry on through these trying days for all of us.

The warden, Dr. Warner M. Hawkins, visited the Toledo Chapter Sept. 14; the Eastern Michigan Chapter at Detroit Sept. 15 and the Western Michigan Chapter at Grand Rapids Sept. 16.

Miss Darnell Speaks in Macon.

A meeting of exceptional interest was held by the Macon, Ga., Chapter Sept. 9 at the Vineville Baptist Church. The Guild was fortunate in having Miss Grace Leeds Darnell of New York as its guest. Miss Darnell is organist and choir director of St. Mary's-in-the-Garden. Miss Darnell related many experiences in her work with junior choirs, commenting that "a child's voice stirs the soul." She cited, too, the practical value of junior organizations in training voices for service in the senior choirs. After a talk in which she emphasized the importance of proper music in the service, she played several organ selections.

Miss Darnell was presented by Mrs. Albert Jelks of the Wesleyan Conservatory of Music, sub-dean of the chapter. Mrs. J. C. Rousseau is dean.

MRS. HAL C. KING, Corresponding Secretary.

Soldiers Give Utah Program.

The program of the Utah Chapter for September was one in which we honored men in the fighting forces. The performers were Private George H. Gowans of Fort Douglas, violinist; Private George Saunders, also of Fort Douglas and former baritone soloist with Fred Waring's orchestra in New York City; James McConkie, pianist, a member of the army reserve at the University of Utah, and Sergeant G. William Richards, assistant to the chaplain at Fort Douglas and a member of the Guild. They performed five works of Cesar Franck, as follows: Cantabile (Sergeant Richards); Allegretto from the Sonata for Violin and Piano (Private Gowans and Mr. McConkie); "Piece Heroique" (Sergeant Richards); "Panis Angelicus" (Private Saunders); Andante from "Grande Piece Symphonique" (Sergeant Richards).

The program was given Sept. 5 in the Granite Stake Tabernacle for members of the Guild and their guests.

Camden Chapter Hears

Recital by Clinton Reed; Dinner Before Program

The Camden Chapter began its 1942-43 season with an excellent dinner at the Homestead coffee shop in Woodbury Sept. 15, at which time we had the privilege of meeting our guests of the evening, Clinton Reed, A.A.G.O., of New York and Raymond Fenning, executive secretary of the Guild. We enjoyed a dinner with these men and then whisked them away to the North Baptist Church in Camden for the remainder of the evening's activities.

At the church many friends joined the smaller group who attended the dinner and enjoyed an excellent recital by Mr. Reed. Brilliant modern music made up the greater part of his program, with a few quieter numbers for contrast, in the more conventional harmonic idiom. To members who are familiar with the North Baptist organ the recital took on added interest, for Mr. Reed did not hesitate to use what he presumed would be the combinations he desired, even though he had only a few minutes to make himself acquainted with the organ. The results were effective.

At the conclusion of the recital Mr. Fenning talked informally to the members about the Guild and its aims and interests. Mr. Reed also spoke briefly concerning service playing.

Mr. Reed's program was as follows: Fanfare and Gothic March, Guy Weitz; "I Call to Thee," Bach; Allegro, Concerto 2, Handel; Minuet and Variations, Stanley; Two Sketches, Schumann; "Eventide," Fairclough; Toccata on "Leoni," Bingham; "Carillon," DeLamar; Impromptu, Vienne; "Litanies," Alain; Symphonic Movement, Guy Weitz. E. H. ELWELL.

Open Twenty-Fourth Year in Texas.

The Texas Chapter began its twenty-fourth year Monday evening, Sept. 21, when members and patrons gathered at beautiful Lee Park for a picnic supper prepared and served by the social committee. A short memorial service preceded the business meeting and tributes were paid to the memory of two of our members who passed away during the summer—Miss Clara Dargan and John McIntire.

Dean Dora Potet presided at the business meeting and announced the committee chairmen for the year. Hubert Kaszinsky announced the plans of the year-book committee, which included a dinner and entertainment for the ministers; talks by renowned musicologists; presentation of a nationally-known recitalist; a unique program in a radio station; a hymn festival by the combined choirs of the city in conjunction with the Guild service; dedication of a new organ in Holy Trinity Church, and the presentation of men from the nearby army camps in organ recitals. This last is our contribution to the defense program.

Officers for the year with Miss Potet are: Hubert Kaszinsky, sub-dean; Betty Martin, registrar; Mrs. F. H. Frye, secretary; Sarah Gallaher, treasurer; Alice Knox Fergusson, historian, and Mrs. H. L. Gharis and Annette Black, auditors.

We are looking forward to a good year.

MRS. F. H. FRYE.

Events for Season in Harrisburg.

The Harrisburg Chapter opened its fall season with a supper and get-together at the Marion House Sept. 21. Everyone present was enrolled in "Ye Olde Time Music School," with all participating in the "grand march" to begin their new fall session of school. Arnold S. Bowman was in charge of the vocalizing classes and Sara K. Spotts gave a musical reading on the "Romantic Life of Joe." Arrangements and entertainment were in charge of Ella Mae Foreman.

The chapter is proud to say that one of its members, Corporal Henry B. Whipple, is now serving with the armed forces somewhere in Ireland.

The executive committee of the chapter met on Sept. 8 at the home of the sub-dean, Miss Ella Mae Foreman, and the dean, Mrs. Joseph Steele, announced committees for this season. The program committee submitted the following list of events for this season: Sept. 21, supper at Marion Party House with Ella Mae Foreman in charge; Oct. 19, recital at St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Middletown; November, a recital featuring November holidays in organ music; December, candle-light carol service at Fourth Reformed Church; Jan. 17, Sunday night recital following evening service at Trinity Methodist Church; January, two-piano recital at the home of Mrs. John R. Henry; Feb. 15, piano recital at the home of Dr. Harry Rhein; March 22, guest recitalist, to be announced; April, two-piano recital at the home of Dr. Harry Rhein; May, business meeting and election of officers; June, annual banquet.

After the meeting Miss Foreman showed "movies" which she had taken at the national convention in Washington last summer.

The following were elected members of the Illinois Chapter: Mrs. Vincent C. Baldwin, Libertyville; Edwin Elliott, Jr., Chicago, and Miss Pearl Amelia LaForce, Hebron, N. D.

The first of the Monday evening forums under the direction of Sub-Dean Walter Flandorf will be held Oct. 12, time and place to be announced.

On Tuesday, Oct. 20, the chapter will hold its first luncheon meeting at 12:30 at the Central Y.W.C.A., 59 East Monroe Street. Each member is to invite his pastor as guest and an eminent clergyman will be the speaker.

Other activities for the year were discussed by the committee and the chapter can be assured of an active and interesting musical season.

ORA E. PHILLIPS, Registrar Pro Tem.

Warden Hawkins in Grand Rapids.

The Western Michigan Chapter opened its season with a dinner meeting held at the Park Congregational Church, Grand Rapids, Sept. 16, at which Dr. Warner M. Hawkins, warden of the American Guild of Organists, was guest of honor. Following his talk, in which he emphasized that the chief concern of the church organist should be to make a true contribution in music to the religious service, Dr. Hawkins gave an illustrative program, improvising on themes submitted by members of the chapter.

Miss Eleanor Malek was in charge of dinner arrangements. Our "dinner music program" progressed from "Prelude, Grazioso e Giocoso" (fruit cocktail) through "Sequense, Cantabile, ma pianissimo," with coupler cups, if desired (coffee), to the "codetta, diminuendo al fine" (peach cake), with never a loss of interest shown by any of us.

New members were welcomed into the chapter by Dr. C. Harold Einecke, the dean, who also announced the program and appointed committees for the new season.

ELEANOR BROENE, Secretary.

New Officers in Nebraska.

At a recent meeting of the Nebraska Chapter the following officers were elected: Dean, George A. Johnson; sub-dean, Miss Ruth Rockwood; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Eloise W. McNichols; board members, Miss Henrietta Rees, Miss Evelyn Smith and Mrs. Flora S. Nelson; chaplain, Dr. A. J. Harms.

Open the Season in San Diego.

The San Diego Chapter held its first meeting this season Sept. 14 at the Fifth Avenue Methodist Church. It opened with a business meeting and installation of new officers. Plans were discussed for the year.

Bertram Chambeau, who recently passed the examination for associate, was presented with a gold pin by the Guild members. Royal A. Brown, who recently married, was presented with a pair of silver candelabra, also by Guild members.

After the business meeting a program was presented on the Estey organ which has recently been rebuilt. Bertram Chambeau played the numbers he used in his recent examination. This was followed by a very interesting group of numbers by Howell Lewis, the church's organist. After the program refreshments were served. The meeting was presided over by Mrs. Olive Regua, the dean.

IRENE E. MITCHELL.

Thirty-three colleagues, subscribers and friends were present. Supper was enjoyed in a beautiful outdoor setting. A recital was given at St. John's Lutheran Church with the following program: Toccata and Fugue in D minor, Bach; Berceuse, Dickinson, and "Grand Choeur" in D, Kinder (Mrs. Ellen Law Parrott); "If with All Your Hearts," Handel (Robert Huston, tenor); Theme and Variations, Faulkes (Pauline Miller); "Praise Ye" ("Attila"), Verdi, and "The King of Love My Shepherd Is," Mendelssohn (Carol Martino, soprano); Robert Huston, tenor, and Paul Maland, bass); Sonata in E minor, Rogers (Earl Stewart).

MRS. ADELAIDE E. ALTLAND,
Secretary and Registrar.

Rochester Chapter Letter.

The Rochester Chapter met Sept. 19 for the first time this season at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Babcock. After a delightful outdoor picnic supper we held a business meeting, at which new officers and new members were introduced and three members were appointed to the executive board. The men who have gone to the army were given honorary membership for the duration of the war.

The Choirmasters' Guild which was formed last spring will meet with us in October and in November the Guild will sponsor a hymn festival at the Central Presbyterian Church, where our dean, Robert Berentsen, is organist and choir-master.

The remainder of our discussion was concerned with activities later in the season. At the conclusion of the business session we listened to organ music recorded by Courboin, Widor, Weitz and members of our chapter.

CATHARINE C. GLEASON,
Corresponding Secretary.

Wisconsin Chapter News.

The first fall meeting of the Wisconsin Chapter was held on the evening of Sept. 21 at the First Methodist Church. Bernard Dieter, head of the theory department at the Wisconsin Conservatory, gave a talk on music.

Redeemer Lutheran Church will be the place for our first program, which will be given next month, at a date not yet determined.

On Nov. 8 the Wisconsin Chapter will sponsor a recital by Claire Coci at Immanuel Presbyterian Church, Milwaukee. A reception for Miss Coci is planned after the recital. The hymn festival this year will be held Nov. 22, in keeping with hymn Sunday.

Dinner and Recital Mark

Central Pennsylvania's First Event of Season

The Central Pennsylvania Chapter held its annual dinner meeting for the organists and clergy Sept. 14 in the First Presbyterian Church of Altoona, with G. Logan McElvany, organist and musical director of the Pittsburgh First Lutheran Church, as the guest speaker. He presented a brief book review on "Music in the Protestant Churches of America" and many constructive thoughts were derived from this exposition. He felt that an organist not only needed training on the organ, but a complete head knowledge of harmony and counterpoint before he should feel equal to his position. He should also have a critical and analytical view to cope with prejudice and tradition, which tend to work against the development of more elevating and lofty music.

After the dinner an organ recital was given in the newly-decorated auditorium. Mrs. Lawrence M. Nugent was at the console and Mrs. Karl Irvin was soloist, leading the singing. The Rev. Dr. Walter L. Ritter, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church and newly-appointed chaplain of the Guild, extended greetings and read an impressive letter from the dean, Alfred Ashburn, who enlisted in June and is at present assistant chaplain at Fort Bragg, N. C. The Rev. Paul Reaser read the creed of the Guild.

Mr. McElvany then presented his program, which included three Bach numbers—Prelude and Fugue in A minor, "Sheep May Safely Graze" and the Sonata "God's Time Is Best"; also "Ronde Francaise," by Boellmann; "Sursum Corda," Elgar; "Carillon," DeLamar; Concerto No. 2, Handel; "Invocation," Francis Snow; "Evening Song," Baisstow; "Reve Angelique," Rubinstein; "Benedictus," Reger, and the Finale from the First Symphony, Vienne.

MRS. ROBERT E. REIFSTECK, Registrar.

E. P. Biggs to Play in Louisville.

A special meeting of the Louisville Chapter was held at the French Village Sept. 14 to formulate plans for a recital to be given by E. Power Biggs at the Memorial Auditorium Nov. 19.

Harry William Myers, organist and choirmaster of the Broadway Baptist Church, suggested that the chapter sponsor eight consecutive Sunday afternoons of organ music for the men in the service, to which the public should be invited. The chapter gratefully accepted the offer of the Broadway Baptist Church to hold these musical services there.

SIX ORGAN CHORALS (Schubler)

By JOHANN SEBASTIAN BACH

Edited by Albert Riemenschneider

In this expansive new publication we present a fine contribution to the organ literature. Prepared by a famous Bach authority, this volume promises to hold a high place with Bach enthusiasts, for it not only includes the editor's versions of the glorious Schubler Chorals, but also the original versions for voice and their subsequent arrangements for organ by the Master himself. Dr. Riemenschneider's new offering is a work of notable proportions. . . . Price, $1.50

New Christmas Music Continues to Arrive on Reviewer's Desk

By HAROLD W. THOMPSON, Ph.D., L.H.D.

Considerable parts of two articles have been devoted to new numbers for Christmas, and I was congratulating the publishers upon their wisdom in arranging for early publication, when September's mail brought fresh supplies. I hope that the following listings are not too late for consideration.

Professor Luther Noss of Yale has edited Volume XVIII of the "Publications of the Carol Society" (American), which consists of "Eight French and Flemish Carols" (Galaxy). In last year's volume the arrangements were all rather elaborate; this time Professor Noss has wisely made the carols much more available and more in the folk style by confining himself mostly to four simple parts—simple, but by no means dull harmonically. "Chansons Noel" (No. 6), one of the jolliest of carol-tunes, is probably pretty familiar, or a cousin of the tune, but there are other charming melodies which I had not heard before. I like particularly the Flemish "Come Thou, My Heart's Delight," from the notable Coussemaker collection; it should be published separately.

Last year I mentioned a carol not yet published, "God Rest You Merry, Innocents," now offered by Galaxy. The very impressive text is by Ogden Nash, the humorist—of all persons! It is distinctly a poem for time of war, perhaps too bitter to fit into the usual mood of the season, but so deeply moving that I would not be surprised to find it the most popular carol of the year. Parents may well say, with Mr. Nash,

God rest you merry, innocents,
To whom all joys are due.
A sweeter Christmas give to yours
Than we bequeath to you.

The setting is by the well-known Baltimore organist Frederick Erickson, who has arranged so delightfully many traditional carols, especially Spanish ones. He has required a chorus, unaccompanied, for a colorful and varied setting which includes a section for SAA with a high soprano sustaining high A. Parts divide.

Ralph Marryott is another composer to whom we owe many fine carols, traditional and original. "All among the Leaves So Green" (Ditson) is a setting of traditional words to new music that could easily pass for an English folksong of high quality. This also is for unaccompanied chorus, though it could easily be rearranged for quartet. In one section a tenor is answered by TBB; in another a soprano is answered by SSA. This sort of thing is always effective.

Professor Nagle has an unaccompanied carol-anthem, best for chorus, called "Long, Long Ago" (Ditson). He, too, with plenty of experience at arranging traditional tunes, has invented one that might pass as a folk melody; indeed, one part of it reminds me of the lovely Scotch folksong "Turn Thee to Me." Inasmuch as there is a very familiar secular song with the title selected for this carol, I should think it proper to substitute the opening half-line of its traditional text, "Wind through the olive trees," or the last line, "Christ came to Bethlehem." (Most people will probably not be irritated by the secular connotation of the composer's title.) There is some division of parts. The Ditson Company is certainly to be congratulated on these two numbers.

Luther's poem "Away in a Manger" has seldom had as pretty a setting as that by Orvis Ross (Galaxy). There is an effective solo for contralto, and you do not need more than a quartet. There is one rather abrupt modulation, before the solo, but everything else is charming.

Dr. Alfred E. Whitehead has arranged simply, in four parts, "Three Christmas Carols (Second Set)," another good Ditson issue. These numbers are fairly familiar. The composer has extended somewhat the Basque carol, which he calls "O Maria," known in the Dickinson edition, I believe, as "O Bethlehem." The other two are French.

Harvey B. Gaul's contribution this year is an "Ancient Moravian Christmas Carol" (Galaxy), accompanied, for boys' and girls' voices or for two equal voices of adults. (Two choirs of children will be exceedingly effective, one of boys and one of girls.) The carol or song was collected in Bethlehem, Pa.

A fluent, pretty carol, chorale-like in structure, has words and music by Charles H. Heller and is entitled "The Crib" (Presser). It is short and easy, using thrice the "In Excelsis Gloria." Presser publishes also "Two Christmas Carols" by E. S. Barnes—one the well-known text "When Christ Was Born of Mary Free" and another, not so well known, "It Is the Christmas Time." These graceful little numbers are for unison singing.

Margrethe Hokanson, whose splendid Duluth choir is so well known, has used her knowledge of unaccompanied chorus in an effective carol of two stanzas, "Angels and Shepherds" (Galaxy). Parts divide, and there are antiphonal effects.

Unusual in form is a "Christmas Dialogue" for junior and senior choirs by R. Deane Shure entitled "The Sheep Lay White Around" (J. Fischer). Two familiar Christmas hymns appear in this interesting anthem, which runs to thirteen pages, closing with triumphant hallelujahs.

Rather in the style of a Lied in melodic outline and accompaniment is Gardner Read's "part-song" for alto solo and mixed voices, "Saw You Never in the Twilight" (Ditson). The accompaniment seems to be conceived for piano or harp, but flutes or a celesta stop could be used on the organ. The solo is "against" the SATB; the most effective performance would be by soloist, quartet and harp.

For TTBB with soprano or tenor soloist there is a tuneful accompanied number, called "Gifts of the Magi" (Galaxy). For SSA there is a new arrangement by Miss Bailey of one of the most popular of Dr. Gaul's carols, the Sioux chant "Stars Lead Us Ever On" (Ditson). A few high voices have a part against the chorus of women; the accompaniment, suggestive of drumming, is important.

Professor Bement has arranged from a tune by Reinecke and to words by Hans Andersen an accompanied number for SSA, "On That Christmas Tide" (Galaxy). For SA chorus and alto soloist is a tuneful little number, accompanied, called "The Virgin's Lullaby" (Presser) from "The Infant Holy," by Louise E. Stairs.

Ditson publishes a new edition of the well-known chorale from Bach's Christmas Oratorio, "How Shall I Fitly Meet Thee." One of the most beautiful melodies in the world, it is always connected in my mind with the Passion.

The firm of Hall & McCreary, which is doing some very good publishing, has a delightful unaccompanied carol in four parts, folk-style of tune, by E. W. Nolte, called "Sing Alleluia." This can be sung by a quartet; it is particularly suited to Christmas day and is one of the best recent carols.

The house of Schmidt has two good numbers: "A Carol to the Child," by Mildred Weston, is an accompanied number with chance for your celesta. The opening is specially effective—a soprano solo answered by a chant, TTBB. Mr. Stoughton has made a pretty "Cradle Hymn" for SSAA, accompanied, from MacDowell's Op. 33, No. 2. The fine words are Coleridge's translation from the Latin.

Carl F. Mueller's best carol, I think, is his "Lord Jesus, in the Wintertime" (G. Schirmer), in modal style. This could be sung unaccompanied in four parts by a quartet, but it will be better with chorus and (on one page) tenor or soprano solo. It is a beautifully dreamy and reverent carol.

Parvin Titus' edition for SSAA of Perilhou's "The Virgin at the Manger" (Boston Music Company) appeared on programs last year. I have just learned that the publisher is the Boston Music Company; that is, I have just received a copy. It is, as you probably know, a luscious number. Mr. Titus uses humming effects well.

For a pretty and easy march see Pietro Yon's "Marche Pastorale" (Galaxy). And so much for Christmas.

Works by Don Malin

Having recently mentioned Mr. Malin's admirable new Christmas number, "As Joseph Was a-Walking" (Birchard), one of the very best compositions of the year, I think that I may well discuss a few of his other original works and editions of recent issue. He is a composer who knows what voices can do, a man of musical ideas that are vigorous, cheerful and masculine, and—not least of his gifts—a person of literary taste. Regarding this last point I am thinking of his admirable setting of "Holy George Herbert's" seventeenth century poem "Let All the World in Every Corner Sing" (Birchard, 1940), a simple, forthright and joyous anthem which deserves to be better known. Then there is a newer anthem, his more ambitious accompanied setting of Thomas Campian's "A Song of Joy" (B. F. Wood, Boston), with occasional divisions into six parts. The closing words are a prayer for peace. Be sure to see this. It runs to fourteen pages.

A third number, one with the color of an orientale, is his "All Thy Works Shall Give Thanks" (Wood, 1941), ten pages of effective music, proving that a good, lengthy anthem of no great difficulty can still be composed and (I hope) sold. Slightly shorter is the new accompanied anthem setting of "Psalm XX" (Kjos, Chicago) dedicated to an Evansville high school chorus and orchestra—the orchestral parts are available. Of course the words are very appropriate just now, beginning "The Lord answer thee in the day of trouble." Again there are occasional divisions into six parts, and a chorus certainly is needed.

Among his arrangements I should like to mention a "Prayer" (Summy), words and music from the Polish, a simple and very beautiful number, one of the most useful issues of this year. It can be sung even by a quartet and should be unaccompanied; it is only three pages in length.

I like almost as well, though it is in an entirely different style, Mr. Malin's robust anthem on Herman's sixteenth century melody, "Let All Together Praise Our God" (Birchard, 1940). Once in a while, as in this piece, the composer seems to me to make his accompaniments too thick, but plenty of others do the same thing. Sometimes I explain this by supposing that the composer is thinking in terms of the orchestra, or in terms of a big chorus, but often I fear that he just wants to make a big noise. Anyhow, keep your eye on Don Malin!

Other New Anthems

There are three specially interesting new anthems for time of war. From Pittsburgh comes Miss Genet's setting of "God Save the People," better known as the familiar hymn "When Wilt Thou Save the People?" (Broadcast Music, Inc., New York). The words by England's famous "Corn-Law Rhymers" rank among the inspired poems of democracy; the music is swinging and vigorous, probably effective as a processional. There is a brief use of descant.

From England comes "The Hymn of the Companies of Service" by Bullock (Oxford, 1941), which also has a marching rhythm. It refers to England and the English two or three times, but these words might be altered. The text is certainly an admirable one for the auxiliary services of defense.

The Scottish house of Paterson (imported by C. Fischer) sends a short anthem setting by Eric Smith of a vigorous hymn, "Arm of the Lord, Awake" (1941). There is a chance for high solo voice and for your tuba; the music is both easy and stirring. It is a frank prayer for victory with that sort of Hebraic earnestness which we expect from Scotland.

The best anthem by R. Deane Shure that I have seen is his "Comfort Ye" (Ditson), which he calls a "pastoral meditation." The words are adapted from Isaiah—and I do not like to have anyone try to improve on Isaiah, who was in important ways the greatest poet of all time. However, Dett's grand anthem on a Negro spiritual, "Listen to the Lambs," reminds me that sometimes liberties may be taken. At any rate, the present unaccompanied anthem in eight parts has colorful music and lots of chance for nuances beloved by those who have a good chorus at command.

"Be Thou My Vision" (Ditson) is a hymn-anthem with a perfectly lovely melody from Ireland. The text is that of an old Irish hymn, translated. I have the fear that the tune may have secular associations, but it hasn't with me. I will try to find out from Graham Godfrey, who is responsible for the beautiful composition in its present form. In any case, I like very much this hymn to the "High King of Heaven."

Eric Thiman's "Praise, Lord, for Thee in Zion Waits" (Novello) is a brisk, short anthem that would do well for processional. The text is suitable for saints' days or for general use as a short anthem of confidence in God. It is easy and accompanied.

I do not recall reviewing previously anything by Bernard Ledington, who has an effective short motet called "Jesus, Lord, Be Thou Mine Own" (Ditson), a prayer of St. Alphonsus. The Latin words are given, and an English translation. The opening harmonies are a little lush, but this is otherwise an admirable and useful number.

I believe that I mentioned the fact that Bach's "Sheep May Safely Graze" is being brought out by Galaxy in an edition for mixed voices; one for TTBB is now obtainable also. This promises to rival "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring," which it resembles. It comes from Cantata No. 208.

Service Music

I think that I missed mentioning a fine Te Deum in C by Philip James (Galaxy, 1941), possibly an early work of his revised, and certainly without the difficulties of his later manner. Then there is the "Benedicite, Omnia Opera" in F by John Ireland (Novello), good, though not one of Ireland's top flight.

Various New Editions

There are a number of Russian things, including the following:

Russian Liturgy-Tkach—"Hear Thou Our Prayer." For TTBB. Three pages. Also "To Thee We Sing," from the liturgy. Four pages. Both for TTBB and idiomatic to that combination. (Kjos.)

Bortniansky-Whitford—"When, Streaming from the Eastern Skies." A simple, good arrangement, with a section for SA and one for bass solo. Not typically Russian music. Accompanied. (Presser.)

Handel's "Thanks Be to Thee" can be obtained for SSA, accompanied with mezzo solo; also for mixed voices, men's voices, two-part chorus or organ solo—all thanks to Dr. Channing Lefebvre (Galaxy).

Edwin Liemohn has a motet on the familiar chorale "A Mighty Fortress" (Galaxy). Part of it is for SATBB; it has interesting structure.

There is one more arrangement of "Ye Watchers and Ye Holy Ones," this time by Professor O. C. Christiansen for the Oberlin Choral Series (Kjos).

Mr. Warhurst has arrangements of a couple of Victorian numbers, this time for treble voices, SSA. Maunder's "Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem" I still like, probably because it was one of the first anthems I sang in a village choir. There is a nice little solo for soprano. I do not like "These Are They" from A. Gaul's "The Holy City," perhaps because I did not sing it in the village choir. Both anthems are published by Presser.

Choral Service

Griffith J. Jones has a choral service for festive occasions one of whose features is the use of a "voice-speaking choir" (Ditson). Nine of the thirty-one pages of music are taken up with Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus" from "The Messiah," which must be in every choir's library. The time of performance is estimated as forty-five minutes.

Vocal Solos

It is of some interest to his many admirers that Garth Edmundson has a vocal solo for high voice called "A Prayer" or "Ave Maria" (Ditson). It is decent music, but hardly in a class with his compositions for organ. Those who use "heart songs" will like "A Prayer of Busy Hands" (Presser) for medium voice by Miss Blanche Douglas Byles.

Harry A. Sykes is bringing out with Presser a "Single Sheet Series" of naive and pretty little hymns for junior choir, which in this case means unison or two parts. I like best "Sweet the Moments, Rich in Blessing" (SA).

If N. Lindsay Norden or someone else has got you worried about just temperament and other mathematical problems of music, have a look at "Acoustics of Music" by W. T. Bartholomew (Prentice-Hall, New York). The author teaches at the Peabody Conservatory, but is also a fellow of the Acoustical Society of America, which sounds like something pretty scientific. Anyway, this is about the most readable book on the subject that I have come upon, and it relieves some of my anxieties regarding choral pitch, besides explaining a number of matters in which we are all interested, including electronic recording.

New Publications for Organ

By WILLIAM LESTER, D.F.A.

"Voix Celeste," a collection of organ music, compiled by Theodore Marier; published by McLaughlin & Reilly Company, Boston.

The first volume under the above title is at hand for notice. The editor has set down the music on two staves; pedal is used very little and when called for is noted on the left-hand bass staff. The pieces therefore will be practical for harmonium or pipe organ. The music contents are planned for use in the service of the Catholic Church. The high musical worth of the contents should endear the book to organists of all denominations on the lookout for service music of fitting quality and appropriate dignity. The composers drawn upon for selections range from Frescobaldi through Bach to Franck, Liszt, Boellmann and Tschai-kowsky. The exceptional worth of the music presented, the good taste exhibited by the compiler-editor and the sturdy form in which the book has been issued—all these factors should make it most attractive to teachers of organ.

Toccata ("Dei Gratias"), by Richard Keys Biggs; published by McLaughlin & Reilly Company.

In this brilliant piece the composer has given us what, unless my prophetic sense is all wrong, will be a genuine "hit" in the concert field. After a page and a half of brilliant passage work on full great, the pedals swing in with a plain-song theme that should have a thrilling effect. This is followed by a vocal-motet style contrasting section on the swell organ. There is quite a little of the antiphonal exchange between the toccata idiom and the swell interlude. The piece closes with a return to the first theme and a climactic coda. The technical demands of this piece are quite moderate and its audience effect is certain to be tremendous. Recitalists looking for a sure-fire closing number will do well to get hold of this Toccata. It is unusually worthwhile musically, of great practical value, a new organ composition of definite importance.

"Ten Pedal Studies for the Organ," by H. William Hawke; published by Elkan-Vogel Company, Philadelphia.

Virtually all of the short etudes in this book are two-part exercises. The composer has made a real contribution to the pedagogy of the organ—a field that has been neglected. These studies are a happy combination of technical values and musical interest. In difficulty they range from about grade 2 through perhaps grade 5—just the field where need is greatest. Every progressive teacher of organ should make it his business to look over the contents of this book. I am certain he will approve the recommendation here made.

"Laudamus Te," for the organ, by Carl F. Mueller; published by G. Schirmer.

An attractive festival postlude made by the composer from an anthem he published in 1939, which has been popular in both its eight-part and four-part versions. As an organ piece it makes a spirited number in the grand chorus style. It is easy to play, sounds better than it really is, and will fit any organ, large or small.

A. M. CANNARSA

A. M. CANNARSA, a well-known organ builder and sub-dean of the Central Pennsylvania Chapter of the American Guild of Organists, is now serving as dean owing to the absence of Dean Alfred Ashburn, who has been called into the army.

Mr. Cannarsa, a veteran of the first world war, served with American Expeditionary Forces in France. He began his career in organ building at the Academy of Music in New York City, in 1914, on the staff of M. P. Möller. In 1920 he joined the staff of the Austin Organ Company and was in charge of over seventy installations for this company. In 1929 Mr. Cannarsa, with his brother, Alighieri Cannarsa, founded the Cannarsa Organ Company, specializing in small organs and rebuilding.

Weinrich Opens Recital Season.

Carl Weinrich will open his 1942 season with recitals at West Point and Exeter Academy. Later in the fall he will fill engagements in New York, Pennsylvania and Virginia, and during January and February he will make a trans-continental tour under the management of Bernard R. LaBerge. Mr. Weinrich has begun his season of teaching at Wellesley College, Columbia University and the Dalcroze School.

Van Dusen Back from East.

Dr. Frank Van Dusen resumed his teaching at the American Conservatory of Music in Chicago and at Wheaton College Sept. 14. He spent the last two weeks of July in the East. During the week of July 20 to 26 he was guest conductor at the conference of sacred music at Ocean Grove, N. J., where he gave several lectures and some private organ lessons.

Liver Ailment Fatal to McAmis.

An autopsy performed after the death of Hugh McAmis, the New York organist and composer, recorded in THE DIAPASON last month, showed a liver condition whose presence had never been suspected and which was made worse by hard drilling in Camp Wolters, Tex., where Mr. McAmis died.

Catholic Church Music

By ARTHUR C. BECKER, A.A.G.O.

J. Fischer & Bro. have sent in four masses which they have recently published. The masses are by well-known organists and composers and each of them rates careful consideration on the part of serious choirmasters.

First is the "Mass in Honor of the Child Jesus," by J. Alfred Schehl. This is written for SAB. It is dignified and very singable, and should meet the requirements of choirs handicapped by lack of tenor material.

The "Mass in Honor of St. Ignatius of Loyola," by Richard Keys Biggs, written for SA, meets requirements of junior choirs in the sense that it is extremely easy and at the same time attractive melodically.

The "Mass in Honor of St. Anthony," by Rene L. Becker, for unison choir, should be studied by those wishing to find a mass written for one voice. It has the dignity necessary for a liturgical service. In fact, the mass is in many respects austere—something to be highly commended.

The "Mass in Honor of the Holy Cross," by Philip G. Kreckel, for four mixed voices, is written for choirs that desire a practical mass which can be sung unaccompanied and one that approaches the classic style of church music. This work offers no great difficulties and organ accompaniment may be used if necessary.

Two attractive motets have been received by this department, the first being "Attende Domine," for four mixed voices, by L. A. Dobbeltstein. The text is taken from medieval liturgy. The contour of the setting is slightly like the setting of early church music, but the harmonic treatment is chorale-like.

"Pater Noster," for four mixed voices and tenor or soprano solo, by Pietro Yon, is a splendid addition to motets of the same setting already familiar to choirmasters. Mr. Yon again demonstrates his melodic gift in this extraordinarily beautiful "Pater Noster."

Philip James Leaves Hospital.

Philip James, the composer and head of the music department in the graduate school of New York University, has just returned to New York from the Southampton, L. I., Hospital, where he was a patient since early August. Mr. James suffered an attack of sheep tick fever as the result of an infection.

Pearl D. Montgomery has resigned as organist and director of music at the Brookline Methodist Church, near Philadelphia, to accept a similar position at the Oak Park United Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia. Mrs. Montgomery had been organist of this church for several years and is returning after an interval of absence.

Mrs. Maria Louisa Kenison, mother of Dr. Samuel J. Kenison, the Chicago organist, died at her home in the suburb of Downers Grove Sept. 11 at the age of 86 years. Funeral services were held at St. Andrew's Church in Downers Grove Sept. 14. Mrs. Kenison was the widow of Dr. Fred H. Kenison, who preceded her in death some years ago.

Organists' Aid in War

While the harsh tocsins of war sound throughout the world, the more soothing and inspiring music of the organ now is being provided for the benefit of America's soldiers and sailors in every base and camp. The contribution of our organists toward the maintenance of morale in the armed forces is hardly realized until one reads the reports that are received almost daily from every part of the United States, telling of the activities of our men who have been enlisted in the defense of their country and who are being drafted for service in the chapels at the various forts. The army seems to have been prompt in putting to good use the talents of church musicians who have left their regular work to help win the war. As a consequence these men are serving as chaplain's assistants, as chapel organists and as recitalists, and the soldiers appreciate their music and are uplifted spiritually by what they hear. When such men as Virgil Fox and a few dozen others we could name are devoting their talents to the soldiers it is not difficult to visualize the increase in musical appreciation that will result from the war and that will last after the deadly conflict has come to an end. Our young men, trained to accuracy of observation and of execution by their organ study, make good fighting men and should be able to shoot straight and to submit to rigid discipline because of the self-discipline involved in good work at the console. At the same time they are benefiting all the soldiers immeasurably and are doing something that will make them and their fellows in the army better men in war and better educated for the era of peace.

Hugh McAmis

A fine musician, a happy spirit and a lovable personality are lost to our profession in the untimely death of Hugh McAmis. Though not killed on the battlefield, his passing in camp so soon after he had enlisted is nevertheless a casualty of the war; and one thinks with dread of the many more such losses the organ world is bound to suffer.

Mr. McAmis' career, though cut off in its prime, was a happy one. He received unusual, though deserved, recognition from his church; his fellows with one accord admired him; as a recitalist he had won national recognition, and his essays into the field of composition achieved instant popularity. His memory will long be cherished.

Organs Must Be Maintained

A situation that may threaten the condition of thousands of organs and will directly affect church music throughout the country is brought to the attention of THE DIAPASON by an organ maintenance man in the East. Inquiries made by him have elicited the statement from his tire rationing board that its members do not consider the servicing of organs essential to the defense program. As the tires of his car are getting well worn and retreading will soon become necessary our correspondent sees the danger ahead that he will be compelled to go out of business, for, like many men who keep organs in good condition, his work requires many miles of travel.

As this man writes: "If all the service men in the country were refused tires, practically all the organs would eventually fall into such disrepair that the churches would lose the powerful inspiration of the organ in divine service. These tire rationing boards are not familiar with the function of the organ repair man. They consider him as a tuner, like the piano tuner who works from house to house."

Here we have the inconsistency by which some persons in authority would even deny the churches the right of keeping their organs fit for use while preaching the necessity of sustaining public morale and acting on this principle by equipping every army camp with at least one electronic instrument. Fortunately the policy apparently adopted by one board may not become the rule, for we have received word from other sources that priority as to tire repairs and replacements has been granted organ men and those taking care of electric blowers in some parts of the country.

Since new organs cannot be built during the war it is more than ever essential that those now in churches render the best and the longest service. No new materials required in defense work are used in organ maintenance, it is pointed out. The organ is a machine used as an essential part of the church's physical equipment and without it services would be demoralized. Since the organ is a machine as well as a musical instrument—and a very sensitive machine at that—it is possible to visualize the danger that all the organs in the country, outside metropolitan sections, where public transportation is available, would soon be dead.

Organ repair men are very few, one mechanic servicing the organs over a large range. Consequently the tires used are few. Because of the nature of the organ there are many emergencies in organ work which can not be adjusted to bus or rail schedules.

Taking all the facts of the situation into consideration, it would seem to be a needless act of harassment of an already sorely-afflicted trade to impose further fruitless restrictions upon it, and no doubt common sense will prevail in most places.

WEDDING PROGRAM TO MARK
RED CROSS RECITAL BY FINK

A recital out of the ordinary will be played by Harold G. Fink at the Fordham Lutheran Church of New York City on the evening of Sunday, Oct. 25. It is to consist of music such as Mr. Fink has used for a number of wedding programs and will be for the benefit of the Red Cross. Mr. Fink will have the assistance of Ruth Schwiebert, soprano, and the junior choir of the church. The "Lohengrin" Bridal Chorus and Barnby's setting of the hymn "O Perfect Love" will be sung by the choir. The organ selections for the evening are: Prelude to "Lohengrin," Wagner; Allegro and Presto, Concerto in G, Bach; Andante and Adagio e Dolce (Trio-Sonata in D minor), Bach; Cantilena in A flat, Demarest; Gigue (Sixth Suite for Cellio), Guilmant-Bach; "Savoyard," Karg-Elert; Intermezzo in D flat, Hollins; "Dreams," Tristan and Isolde, Wagner; "Adoration," Borowski; "Love Song at Twilight," Mauro-Cottone; "The Reed-Grown Waters," Karg-Elert; "Ave Maria," Schubert; Wedding March, Mendelssohn.

Mr. Fink has given special attention to the programs he plays at weddings and he has presided at the organ in his church for approximately 100 nuptial events in the last few years. He plays ordinarily for forty-five minutes to an hour preceding the ceremony and has been heard by large audiences, as the congregation always is invited to weddings of church members at Fordham. While the offerings include light classical selections, every program contains at least one movement from a Bach trio-sonata and usually also a chorale prelude.

Letters from Our Readers

Recalls Another Erben Organ.

Tucson, Ariz., Aug. 28, 1942.—Dear Mr. Gruenstein: Since I read the article in THE DIAPASON describing the Henry Erben organ in Charleston, S. C., my fingers have been itching to tell you that I, too, cut my teeth on one of that breed. When the First Presbyterian Church of Louisville, Ky., was built at Sixth and Green Streets back in the 1830s, an organ built in New York by Henry Erben was shipped to New Orleans and thence trans-shipped up the Mississippi and Ohio Rivers to Louisville, where it was installed in the rear gallery. Later it was moved to the lower floor, to the left of the pulpit.

My first knowledge of the instrument was during the eighties, when I, a small boy, being trained to attend church regularly, listened Sunday after Sunday to its sweet tones. Later, as we always had a Mason & Hamlin reed organ in our home, I would try to reproduce the hymns on that and usually spent several hours Sunday afternoons working them out.

This church, overtaken by the growth of the mercantile area, was sold in 1888 and a new one was dedicated in 1891. But the congregation made a great mistake by moving that old organ, by this time worn out, to the new church, where I had the pleasure (?) of playing it regularly until 1895, when it was dismantled and a new one was installed—a tracker organ built by James Cole of Boston.

The mahogany case was an exact copy of the Charleston Erben and the specifications were practically the same. The swell pipes down to tenor F were in a swell-box, operated by a pump-handle swell pedal that had to be pushed by the right foot under a notch in the panel to keep it open. Only two stops "ran through" and these basses were known as the choir organ. The great organ stops were arranged in one perpendicular row up the right hand panel and were as follows: Open diapason, 8 ft.; stopped diapason, 8 ft.; gamba (which must have been put in to replace something else, for the ivory name plate was of a different vintage from the others); night horn, 4 ft.; principal, 4 ft.; twelfth, fifteenth, sesquialtera, 3 ranks. On low pressure this diapason chorus was sweet and satisfying, provided you did not use the mixture. This was an abomination. I do not recall the swell stops so well. I think it had a dulciana, stopped diapason, 4-ft. flute, open diapason and a hautbois that was most raucous and a thing to be avoided at all times.

The manuals and pedals ran down to G below CC and there were only two couplers—swell to great and great to pedal. The pedals were therefore coupled to the manuals at 16-ft. pitch and were limited to an octave and a half. The console was built into the case and was closed by two sliding cupboard doors.

The pedals were very narrow and close together. About the only pieces that could be played on this organ were the hymns of the church and the little things culled out of opera, oratorio, piano works—the great favorites being Handel's Largo, the Andante from Mozart's Second Piano Sonata, airs from "Faust," etc.

The playing of modern organ works with pedal obbligato was out of the question, but my first practice was obtained by the use of a set of organ pedals that fell my way which I attached crudely to my upright piano's bass keys, after hiking the piano up about four inches from the floor on blocks, and using an organ bench instead of a stool. Later I obtained the privilege of working on a fine three-manual tracker organ built by Roosevelt the greater part of a year and this was very helpful.

With best wishes and assuring you I enjoy my DIAPASON as much as ever, I beg to remain,

JOHN M. McBRIDE,

A Book That Should Be Read.

School of Music, Urbana, Ill., Sept. 18, 1942.—Editor of THE DIAPASON. Dear Sir: Let every organist who believes his profession has contributed something to the development of music in America read David Ewen's "Music Comes to America." He will be fascinated by the panorama and amazed at his part in it.

Recalling the Past
from The Diapason's
Files of Other Years

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO THE following events were placed on record in the October, 1917, issue—

Portland, Ore., dedicated its new municipal organ Sept. 6. At the initial recital William Robinson Boone, Edgar E. Coursen and Lucien E. Becker were at the console. The organ was the work of the Ernest M. Skinner Company.

Richard K. Biggs sailed for France to serve in a naval base hospital unit, leaving his position at St. Luke's Church in Brooklyn.

Dr. Charles E. Allum, a well-known organist and distinguished trainer of boy choirs, died Aug. 19 at his home in Wheaton, Ill. He was born in England in 1852 and came to the United States in 1901.

Joseph Bonnet opened his second American tour Sept. 21 with a recital at Williams College.

THE DIAPASON opened its new headquarters in the Kimball Building, Chicago, and invited its friends to call at its editorial and business office.

TEN YEARS AGO IN THE OCTOBER, 1932, issue, the following events were noted—

The National Association of Organists and the Canadian College of Organists held a joint convention in Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 30 to Sept. 2. Dr. Charles Heinroth was elected president of the N. A. O. He succeeded Harold V. Milligan.

Among those who passed the fellowship examination of the A.G.O. were Paul S. Callaway, Arthur W. Howes, Jr., Hugh Porter, Theodore Hunt and G. Darlington Richards.

Among new works for the organ reviewed by William Lester were the Symphony in G major by Leo Sowerby, the Symphony by Guy Weitz and Philip G. Kreckel's "Musica Divina."

LAST CONCERT IN GERMANIC
MUSEUM BY RAND'S CHORUS

W. Judson Rand, Jr., was in charge on July 30 of the last concert to be given for the duration of the war in the Germanic Museum of Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass. The entire museum building has been taken over by the army for its chaplains. Mr. Rand directed his polyphonic choir of Christ Church in Cambridge. The accompanist was Ensign Charles Dodsley Walker, who has been taking Mr. Rand's place during the summer, and Mr. Rand writes that Mr. Walker is largely responsible for the success of the concert as he did most of the work of preparing the chorus.

Mr. Rand's organ numbers were the Bach Partita "O God, Thou Faithful God" and four chorale preludes, and the "Cathedral" Prelude and Fugue in E minor. The choir sang: "Kyrie Eleison" ("Missa Iste Confessor"), "By the Waters of Babylon" and "Like as the Hart," Palestrina; "Te Lucis Ante Terminum," Tallis; "Laudate Nomen Domini," Tye; "Go Not Far from Me, O God," Zingarelli; "Upon the Day of Judgment," Arkhangelsky; "Hear, Lord, Our God," Tschaiakowsky; Cherubic Hymn, Gretchaninoff; "O Praise the Name of the Lord," Tschaiakowsky, and "Psalm 150," Franck.

There was a full house that appreciated this type of music. The group which sang is a volunteer chorus having its nucleus in the regular volunteer mixed choir which sings at Christ Church in the evenings on Sundays during the winter. There were thirty-two members present for the concert.

Death of Helen T. McManus.

Miss Helen T. McManus of Elizabeth, N. J., for many years organist of St. Genevieve Roman Catholic Church in that city, died Sept. 19 at her home after a short illness. She was a graduate of the Pius School of Liturgical Music of New York and the New York Conservatory of Music. Surviving are three brothers—the Rev. John H. McManus, pastor of St. Genevieve's Church, and James E. and Francis A., both of Brooklyn—and four sisters, Mrs. Frank J. Pfaff, Mrs. Thomas A. Liddy and the Misses Mary and Gertrude McManus.

"Worship in Song" is an attractive title, somewhat more definite in meaning than "The Hymnal." Possibly, however, if the ordinary reader set himself the job of using the meanings of worship and song as clues to lead him, he would be somewhat surprised to find that the two words carried him to a particular kind of book full of short religious poems of a somewhat severe type—not "song" of the concert-room, but "song" in the wider sense of sounds grateful to the ear.

"Worship in Song," Caroline B. Parker, editor, D. Appleton-Century Co., Inc., New York and London, 1942, contains 302 tunes and 359 hymns by 259 composers and sources. There are forty-four pages of service readings. Weight, 22 ounces. Is easy to hold. The aim of the publishers has been to produce a hymnal of medium size and of high quality, but with enough popular hymns and tunes to make it cover the needs of practically all services. I judge they have succeeded in their aim.

I have read with care all the tunes and find thirty-four that I do not remember to have heard before. I doubt that the inclusion in this hymnal of "The British Grenadiers," fitted out with "sacred" words, can be defended, but perhaps to balance that we have "The Star-Spangled Banner" in the key of A flat "tipped in" at the front. About sixteen per cent of the tunes show German sources or German influences; and there is a good proportion of tunes in minor keys throughout.

"Bethany" ("Nearer, My God, to Thee") appears here and in practically all hymnals—since 1903 at any rate—in 4/4 or 4/2 time; the first time I ever saw it in double meter was in Horatio Parker's "The Hymnal." This he edited for the Episcopalians and it was adopted by the General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church and dated 1903. In 1916 "The New Hymnal" was issued under the same authorization, edited by a committee of eighteen gentlemen; three of the musicians on that committee are still living. We are informed that the new edition of "The New Hymnal" will be published in 1943. Can anyone give me the facts in regard to the alteration of "Bethany" from 6/4 time to 4/2 or 4/4? Who first published the alterations? When was the foul deed committed? In 1859 the "Sabbath Hymn and Tune Book," compiled by Lowell Mason, Edwards A. Park and Austin Phelps, contains "Bethany" in its original 6/4 version, which I make bold to say is better than the version that has appeared since 1903 in our modern hymnals.

Joseph Barnby's old tune "Sarum" (incorrectly indexed as 255) takes care of "For All the Saints," but Vaughan Williams' tune "Sine Nomine," which sprang into popularity in 1931 ("Songs of Praise," enlarged edition), is not included. There are two versions of "Sine Nomine"; perhaps there was not space for both. I incline to the opinion that the version with a steadily moving pedal, voices in unison, is too much a piece of instrumental music, pushing the words along relentlessly—but it is good fun. It is surprising that "Kremsler" (noble tune!) should have alternative versions of words, since that on page 10 is so much better than the one on page 22. There are several descants; and other interesting features are the German words to "Stille Nacht" and Latin words for "Adeste Fideles." The editors are even bold enough to include a few Victorian tunes—Barnby (twelve), Dykes (eighteen), Henry Smart (six).

What makes a good hymn-tune? The revival or mission tunes of the Moody and Sankey period are thought to be poor hymn-tunes because of parsimonious harmony, secular rhythms and negligible musicianship.

Why are the Horatio Parker hymn-tunes not found in current hymnals? Because, so far as I can make out, in compass, complexity of harmony and difficulty they are not fitted for congregational singing of our day; they are not good hymn-tunes, although they are excellent music.

Why are tunes of the Victorian epoch (1850 to 1900) frowned upon by compilers of advanced collections of hymn-tunes? Because, according to Athelstan Riley (see the British "Who's Who") they are written in the style of the part-song. Style is as powerful in church music as in woman's dress. If you want to write "real stylish" hymn-tunes mind your p's and q's.

Uncle Mo has broken out again, this time getting after me for my advocacy of transposing congregational hymn-tunes to convenient keys. He hustled into the studio the other day in too much of a hurry to say how-de-do.

"By Jove, Mac, you'll get yourself into professional disrepute if you're not a good deal more careful what you write in your column. Don't you know that every key has its own characteristics and individuality? This idea of transposition of tunes is all wrong. You can't fool with those things, and besides—"

"Hold on there, Mo! Don't be in such a hurry; sit down in that comfortable chair and try a Pittsburgh stogy, which reminds me of a story of Matthew Arnold, the English poet who—a long way back in the 1800s—had an engagement to lecture at Wellesley College. He and Mrs. Arnold accepted the hospitality of a pleasant family living in Newton who were connected in an informal way with the college. Later the Newton people reported that the family had its usual breakfast—griddle cakes and maple syrup. The poet looked at these with some anxiety, but Mrs. Arnold began to eat the cakes and in a moment said to her husband: 'Mathew, try them! They're not as nasty as they look.'"

Mo caught on, not only as to English poets and stogies, but as to transpositions. Thank God for transpositions!

I have little or no sympathy with those people who advocate unison singing in the hymn-tunes and frown on singing in parts. Granted that it is magnificent when pitch and familiarity with the air are both present, we must remember that almost invariably circumstances are against it. During the twenty-seven years I was organist and choirmaster at Wellesley there was one tune only that (at the hymn-book pitch) drew out the unison, collective voice in all its volume and effectiveness, and that is E. J. Hopkins' tune Ellers ("Saviour, again to Thy dear name we raise"). It never failed to stimulate a service response.

If we work hard for congregational singing at the unison (melody) we must first determine the compass of the collective voice, including women's and men's voices, high, lower and lowest; I am inclined to place the upward limit at one foot C, C on the third space of the treble clef. With high voices singing melody, an upward limit of pitch might well be E, and transposition might not disturb the key color enough to hurt Uncle Mo's feelings; but transposition to suit the collective voice would drive the congregation into rebellion.

Why not drop this unison singing idea? Singing in parts, to me, seems to take care of more of the difficulties inherent in congregational singing than singing in unison.

From "The Hymnary," a book of church song (August, 1872), preface to the second edition with music; pages vii to x, by J. Barnby: "It has sometimes been urged that because a congregation sings a certain song with the zealous unanimity of evident enjoyment, the tune must be good. Such an argument might be admitted if the personal enjoyment produced by singing were the end and aim of church music. But it entirely falls to the ground if we proceed on the principle that the singing of every hymn is an act of worship. Church music must have the elements of solemnity. * * * The true test of a hymn-tune is that it shall equally satisfy the worshiper, whether musician or amateur. * * * In a hymn-tune a certain element of simplicity should hardly ever be wanting. * * * The clergy soon split into two parties. The one adopted an ancient and severe style of music, almost devoid of interest save that which is antiquarian. [A sly dig at plainsong, no doubt.—H. C. M.] * * * The other party introduced a series of melodies hitherto associated with profane subjects, * * * losing sight of the grave fact an offering was being made of things which were second-hand." (Barnby adds metronome marks to every tune, (2) adopts the quarter-note for the rhythmic beat and (3) discards the intermediate double-bar.)

A "general index" allows one to give the exact number of tunes used by any one composer; valuable for research.

You will remember how Myra Hess three years ago began giving frequent concerts in London, using the halls of the National Art Gallery in lieu of a regular concert room. These concerts were successful in helping other agencies keep up the morale of Londoners during the terrible days of the German blitzkrieg. Myra's self-sacrificing labors were recognized by the conferring on her of the title "Dame," a distinct honor.

This splendid lead by Dame Myra Hess was taken up by Harold Darke of St. Michael's, Cornhill, who has carried on weekly an informal choral society, open to any music-lover. St. Michael's Church is in the city and there are thousands of clerks who find rest and solace from war's terrors and griefs in an hour of music in which they can actually join. Many an American organist whose church is in the middle of a business district has the chance of his life in duplicating Dr. Darke's ministry.

This was all brought to mind in reading in THE DIAPASON for September the account of the free choral singing and voice training carried on by Austin C. Lovelace, M.S.M., in Lincoln, Neb., for three months the past summer. We hope that other members of our American Guild of Organists have Mr. Lovelace's wholesome imagination for public service, thus helping their fellow men and their country.

Dr. Schweitzer Keeps on with African Work; Aid from Americans

The Albert Schweitzer Fellowship, of which Professor Everett Skillings of Middlebury College, Middlebury, Vt., is chairman, reports that Dr. Albert Schweitzer, the noted organist and interpreter of Bach, is still carrying on his medical work for African negroes at his hospital in Lambarene, French Equatorial Africa.

The Albert Schweitzer Fellowship was formed soon after the outbreak of the war to promote interest in having Dr. Schweitzer come to America to give organ recitals and lectures and to raise funds for his humanitarian work. Letters from him reveal the steadfast devotion which impels him and his wife and staff to stay in the torrid zone. The hospital is more crowded than ever before with patients and he considers it his duty to stand by them, but he hopes at the earliest moment to come to America.

During the present year medical supplies of the value of $1,350 have been shipped to Dr. Schweitzer and $1,200 has been cabled for running expenses. A letter from Dr. Schweitzer tells of the arrival of one of these medical shipments after its perilous voyage. He writes among other things: "On May 11 the boxes with their precious contents of medicines and hospital supplies arrived from your country. Impossible to describe our joy! We found in them all our urgent needs supplied. Each box had new surprises. Everything was very well packed; nothing broken; I want to express in this first moment of joy my deep gratitude to all contributors. Our work in this region is more necessary than ever in view of the type of people who need our help in their suffering; in view also of the fact that doctors in this region are rarer now than in times of peace."

During the two years of its activity the fellowship has raised $2,350 for medicines and hospital supplies and $2,200 for running expenses of the hospital.

ROBERT YATES EVANS, NOW AT PERRIN FIELD, IN RECITAL

Robert Yates Evans, now a private, first-class, in the air corps at Perrin Field, Sherman, Tex., was heard in a recital at the First Baptist Church of Sherman Sept. 10. His program consisted of the following selections: "As Jesus Stood beside the Cross," Scheidt; "From God I Ne'er Will Turn," Buxtehude; Triple Fugue in E flat major ("St. Anne"), "Saviour of the Heathen, Come," and "Lamb of God, Our Saviour," Bach; Sixth Sonata (Chorale and Variations), Mendelssohn; "Behold, a Rose Is Blooming" and "Deck Thyself, My Soul," Brahms; "In dulci Jubilo" and "By Waterside in Babylon," Karg-Elert; "Rhosymedre," Vaughan Williams; "Evensong," Johnston; "Piece Heroique," Franck.

From Sept. 1, 1941, until he enlisted in the army May 20 Mr. Evans was organist and director of the choir of men and boys at Christ Church, Rochester, N. Y. At Perrin Field he is in charge of the music for the Protestant services and a clerk in the personnel office.

Mr. Evans received his bachelor of music degree from the Conservatory of Music of Kansas City, Mo., where he studied with Edna Billings. He received the master of music degree at the Eastman School of Music last May after study for two years with Harold Gleason. In 1941 he passed the associateship examination of the A.G.O. and this year was awarded the choirmaster's certificate of the Guild. He was recording secretary of the Rochester Chapter, A.G.O., last year.

WILLIAM C. TEAGUE TO JOIN ARMED FORCES OF THE U. S.

William C. Teague, for the last year a student at Curtis Institute of Music and organist and choirmaster of St. Elizabeth's Episcopal Church in Philadelphia, is about to enter the armed forces of the nation. On the afternoon of Sept. 6 he gave a recital on the reconditioned organ in the First Presbyterian Church of Gainesville, Tex., and was heard in these compositions: Prelude and Fugue in A

MISS M. ETHEL BEYER, ATLANTA ORGANIST

MISS M. ETHEL BEYER, who has presided at the console of the organ at the Druid Hills Methodist Church of Atlanta, Ga., since December, 1919, is minister of music in the church, directing the senior choir, young people's choir, girls' chorus and junior choir. These four choirs, of twenty-five to forty mixed voices each, organized and trained by Miss Beyer, have won a reputation for choral blending and for the annual capella Christmas carol service.

The organ is a two-manual Hall, built in 1912. Although a rather small instrument, it is adequate for the size of the church, with its seating capacity of 750.

Miss Beyer made her first appearance as an organist in Atlanta at St. Paul Methodist Church in September, 1908. There she remained for two and a half years. From there she went to the Central Congregational, where she presided at the console for eight and a half years before taking up her duties at her present post, where she has been in continuous service for nearly twenty-three years. This record for number of years in one church exceeds, perhaps, that of any other organist in Atlanta.

Miss Beyer, a native of Phoenix, Md., gave her first public performance at the age of 12, playing at a wedding to substitute for her mother, who was ill. Her mother, Mary E. (Frederick) Beyer, was organist and her father, William L. Beyer, was choir director, in Phoenix, a suburb of Baltimore. Moving to Georgia with the family, Miss Beyer attended Wesleyan College in Macon. She was graduated with a bachelor of music degree. She also holds a postgraduate certificate from Wesleyan, being the second postgraduate in piano from the college. Her teachers in organ have included Dr. Dingley Brown at Wesleyan, John O'Donnelly in Atlanta, Dr. David McK. Williams of St. Bartholomew's Church in New York and Horace Hollister of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York. She attended the School of Church Music and Choral Institute of Northwestern University last summer.

Miss Beyer has served as dean of the Georgia Chapter of the American Guild of Organists for two terms and is now the sub-dean. She served two years on the board of the Atlanta Music Club; was treasurer of the In-and-About Atlanta Music Educators' Club and is a member of the Hymn Society of America. She is a teacher of organ and piano. Several of her pupils are serving as organists in Atlanta churches. Miss Beyer has acted as accompanist on tour for such famous concert artists as Jeanette Vreeland, Nevada Van der Veer, Julia Claussen, Ethyl Hayden and Lambert Murphy.

minor, Bach; Chorale Prelude, "Come, Saviour of the Gentiles," Bach; "Jagged Peaks," Clokey; "Divertissement," Viere; Concert Variations, Bonnet; "Benedictus," Reger; "Vigili et Sancti," Snow; Serenade, Schubert; "Prayer" from "Hänsel and Gretel," Humperdinck; Toccata from Fifth Symphony, Widor.

VINCENT E. SLATER PLANS SEASON IN BOUND BROOK, N. J.

Under the direction of Vincent E. Slater an elaborate series of musical services has been planned for the winter at the Presbyterian Church of Bound Brook, N. J. This is the third year in which Mr. Slater, organist and director at this church, is presenting such services. Mrs. Kinsella at New Post.

Cornelia Long Kinsella has resigned as organist and choir director of the Luther Place Memorial Church, Washington, D. C., a position she has filled with success for eleven years. She has accepted a similar position at the Brightwood Methodist Church. For several years prior to the amalgamation of the First Presbyterian Church and the Church of the Covenant Mrs. Kinsella was director and organist at the historic First Church. She is popular as an accompanist, having for several years officiated in that capacity for the Potomac Electric Power Company glee club in its concert appearances. Her organ studies were with Mabel Frost, whom she succeeded as organist and choir director of Douglas Memorial Methodist Church, where she remained several years before going to the First Presbyterian.

Kilgen Organ for Church in Mexico.

The Sacred Heart Catholic Church of Queretaro, D. F., Mexico, has just installed a two-manual organ built by the Kilgen Organ Company of St. Louis. Typical of present conditions is the fact that because of the recent Mexican declaration of war the organ took nine weeks to go from the factory at St. Louis to Queretaro, although it was shipped as regular freight via the principal railroad lines.

ROELOFSMA ENTERS ARMED FORCES; LOS ANGELES NEWS

By ROLAND DIGGLE, Mus.D.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 15.—Another of our prominent organist-choirmasters in the person of H. Toni Roelofsma has gone into the armed forces. Since his appointment to St. Paul's Catholic Church some time ago the music there has become a feature. He has been given a leave of absence and will return to his post when the time comes.

A newcomer in our midst is Dr. Laurence A. Petran, who has come from Baltimore to take up work at the University of California in Westwood. Among his duties will be the weekly recital to be given on Fridays during the year.

Mary Alberta Doglio, a pupil of Pietro Yon, gave an interesting recital at the Blessed Sacrament Church in Hollywood Sept. 8. Among the more interesting numbers were Mr. Yon's "Sonata Romantica," "Christmas in Sicily" and First Concert Study.

John Burke goes to the First Congregational Church in Los Angeles as chief organist. Mr. Burke is a graduate of the Westminster Choir School and comes to Los Angeles from Andover Academy in Massachusetts.

An inexpensive, somewhat less than standard size church hymnal that is remarkably rich and varied in content.

Worship in Song

HERE is a beautifully printed book of 367 vital hymns and tunes, choral responses, prayers, and responsive readings, selected, edited, and written with rare skill and with an intimate understanding of the needs of the Church and of the spiritual aspiration of today's Christians.

"For a hymnal of somewhat less than standard size," says The Christian Century, "it would be hard to find a more satisfactory collection." The Diapason says: "It is eminently practical and fills a need apart from those met by larger hymnals. In quality the collection is of the best. Notwithstanding the size, the hymnal is complete." Dr. Walter M. Howlett, Secretary, The Greater New York Federation of Churches, says: "A perfectly splendid book."

Persons who are responsible for hymn-book purchases are invited to write for a returnable examination copy of Worship in Song.

THE HYMN SOCIETY OF AMERICA, INC.

President—William Watkins Reid, New York.
 Vice-Presidents—Paul C. Warren, D.D.; Mrs. Clarence Dickinson, Oscar Thomas Olson, D.D.
 Executive Secretary and Chairman Hymn Festival Committee—Reginald L. McAll, 2268 Sedgwick Avenue, New York.
 Corresponding Secretary—Stephen Ayers, S. T. M., Box 423, Manhasset, N. Y.
 Recording Secretary and Chairman Executive Committee—The Rev. Deane Edwards, 297 Fourth Avenue, New York.
 Librarian—William W. Rockwell, D. Th., New York.
 Treasurer—Miss Edith Holden, Rock Ridge, Greenwich, Conn.

A splendid folder of suggestions and information sent this summer by the A.G.O. to the heads of all its chapters is bearing fruit. Bound in the folder with other helpful material was a message from the Hymn Society giving practical hints on hymn activities for the chapter, such as festivals and demonstrations for congregations with their choirs. Two chapters already have responded, seeking help in planning hymn festivals.

Organists are now planning special musical events of the winter. Why not hold a hymn festival, either in your own church alone, or with the help of nearby churches? In many churches a new hymn-book has been installed recently. There is no better way to discover its treasures than by preparing to sing them as worship elements in such a service. These festivals are very appropriate just before Thanksgiving, and Thanksgiving Day services can be planned to use significant new hymn texts. The society is ready to share your problems and will welcome any definite inquiries. A new statement about hymn festivals will be mailed on request.

We hope that many chapters will continue to hold organist-clergy events, either as dinner meetings or as discussion groups. The use of hymns and their effective interpretation may well be taken up at such a meeting. Pastors everywhere desire our help in giving congregational worship greater spiritual emphasis through hymns. They will cooperate readily in any definite plan for making people more interested in singing the great hymns, both new and old.

New Members Are Welcomed

During the summer six applications for membership were received, and they were acted on favorably at the September meeting of the executive committee. We welcome these friends into our fellowship: The Rev. W. Sherman Kerschner, D.D., Philadelphia; Miss Helen Anne Provine, Urbana, Ill.; the Rev. Alvin F. Brightbill, M.Mus., Chicago; Sydney W. MacAlpine, Manchester, Conn.; John M. Priske, M.A., Nashua, N. H.; the Rev. Frank M. McKibben, D.D., Evanston, Ill. The interests of these new members are as follows: Two are organists by vocation; one is a supervisor of music in the public schools; two are connected with theological seminaries, one being in charge of its musical instruction, the other concerned with training in Christian education; the sixth is a pastor with excellent experience in the selection of hymn-book material.

Hymn Contest Closes

When this gets into your hands the last hymn text will have been received in the contest and the eligible entries will be reaching the judges. A total of 400 hymns had been accepted for entry in the three prize categories by Sept. 15 and many more will be received before the final date of Oct. 1.

Our Twentieth Anniversary

The date of the celebration of our twentieth anniversary in New York has been set for Sunday, Nov. 15, and the following day. Affiliated societies and chapters are hoping to observe the event at the same time. The plans include a festival service at St. Bartholomew's Church Sunday afternoon. Dr. Howard Chandler Robbins will be the special preacher and Dr. Sargent will conduct the service, while the music will be in charge of Dr. David McK. Williams. On Monday there will be addresses and panel discussions in the morning and afternoon, while the evening will be devoted to a dinner at the Town Hall Club. The Rev. Paul Warren, D.D., will preach at the panel discussion in the afternoon.

Full information about these events and about what we may do to help you in your plans for improved congregational singing in your own church will be sent you gladly on receipt of a stamped envelope. The papers of the society, its hymn leaflets, etc., are for sale at cost price and information about festivals can be sent you promptly. Address the office at 2268 Sedgwick Avenue, New York.

SALAMANCA, N. Y., CHORUS SINGS HAYDN'S "CREATION"

The Community Chorus of Salamanca, N. Y., sang excerpts from Haydn's "Creation" at the First Congregational Church Sunday afternoon, Aug. 30, and in doing so took a long step toward stimulating renewed interest in music in the city. Theodore Vosburgh, Mus.D., associate professor of music at Albion College, Albion, Mich., was the conductor. Mr. Vosburgh came to Salamanca to spend the summer vacation at the home of his wife's parents. The chorus has been handicapped since it has lacked a permanent conductor for two years. However, forty-one members responded and the results were highly commended by the large audience.

Prior to this time the chorus was represented by most of its membership at the Chautauqua regional choir festival Aug. 8, when 500 sang "The Creation" under the conductorship of Dr. Walter A. Howe of Worcester, Mass. For the local rendition there were organ and piano accompaniments. Edward B. Vreeland, Jr., was at the organ, and Evelyn Green Vosburgh, wife of the conductor, was at the piano.

Walter James, who has just received his master's degree at the Eastman School of Music, has consented to keep the chorus intact through the winter months until a permanent conductor is selected. "The Messiah" will be sung at Christmas time.

AUSTIN C. LOVELACE GOES TO CHARLOTTE, N. C., COLLEGE

Austin C. Lovelace, M.S.M., has accepted a position at Queens College, Charlotte, N. C., to teach organ and theory. For the last year he has been organist and choirmaster of the Church of the Holy Trinity, Lincoln, Neb., where he instituted a series of musical vespers on the first Sunday of each month and recently held a free voice class during the summer months, working on the "Elijah." For his final service on Sept. 13 the choir sang Mr. Lovelace's original compositions, including a "Benedictus Es" recently accepted for publication by H. W. Gray; "Fierce Raged the Tempest" and "May the Grace of Christ." At a farewell party the choir presented Mr. Lovelace with a chiming electric clock.

In addition to his work at Queens College Mr. Lovelace will be director of the youth choirs and tenor soloist at the Myers Park Presbyterian Church, working with James C. Pfohl.

Blodgett to Begin Work at Museum.

Walter Blodgett, who will succeed Arthur W. Quimby as curator of music of the Cleveland Museum of Art Jan. 1, 1943, will make his first appearance in advance of these new duties, giving the opening McMyler organ recital Sunday, Oct. 4, at 5:15 in the garden court of the museum. Mr. Quimby resigned to head the department of music of Connecticut College. For his first recital Mr. Blodgett will play a program which will be repeated on all the Sundays in October, including: Toccata, Adagio and Fugue in C major, Bach, and Chorale in E, Franck.

Musical Demonstration Nov. 11.

A nation-wide musical demonstration of American unity as a feature of the Armistice Day observance Nov. 11 was proposed by the Music Industries War Council at a meeting held in Chicago Sept. 9. The plan is to ask every American man, woman and child to join in singing the national anthem immediately following the one-minute silent tribute to the heroes of the first world war at 11 a. m. All radio stations will be asked to broadcast "The Star-Spangled Banner" at that time, and bands and other instrumental groups will be encouraged to play the anthems in streets and public squares.

DALE YOUNG

CORPORAL DALE W. YOUNG, instructor of organ at the Jordan Conservatory of Music and organist-choirmaster at Zion Evangelical Church, Indianapolis, Ind., enlisted in the armed forces March 31. He is stationed in the Thirty-seventh Medical Training Battalion at Camp Grant, Ill., as a chaplain's secretary and organist and director of an army choir. Corporal Young has been playing a series of Sunday evening organ recitals at Emmanuel Chapel for the entertainment of the medical soldiers. He has appeared several times as piano soloist over MBS, Camp Grant Hour.

WAR PROBLEMS ARE MET
BY THEODORE SCHAEFER

Theodore Schaefer has done some careful planning in order to place his choir at the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church of Washington, D. C., on an efficient war basis. In the process neither he nor his singers have indulged in a vacation. He is now planning his third annual series of musical Wednesday evenings and will open in October with Bach's "A Stronghold Sure." Meanwhile Mr. Schaefer awaits the call of the nation to the armed forces.

At the beginning of the summer, Mr. Schaefer reports, several factors made themselves obvious. Vacations were not to be plentiful, so that many singers would be available. Many choir members were working alternate Sundays or every third Sunday, so that regularity would be impossible. Government workers continued to come in from all parts of the country, ready for service of some kind in their newly-chosen church. Decentralization of government offices and the draft were making for a constant turnover in the chancel choir.

It was therefore decided to maintain a summer choir, but not to obligate any one person for all Sundays. Members signed up for all Sundays on which they would be willing to sing and would be available. Then auditions were opened and continued all summer. From the two lists a unit of twenty-four voices was chosen for each Sunday. It was understood that a person might be asked not to sing in order to maintain balance, or asked to sing, if possible, on a Sunday for which he had not signed up, in order to maintain balance. No attempt was made to rehearse weeks ahead. The hour and a half rehearsal was devoted to the Sunday music for the immediate week.

The results have been highly gratifying, Mr. Schaefer writes, and a choir in the chancel kept the services alive and there was no feeling of summer slump.

FRANCIS S. MOORE ASKED
TO REPEAT PROGRAM OF 1941

The "University of Life," an organization of young people, has made the request of Francis S. Moore that he repeat the music appreciation program that he gave in his church last year. It consisted of a short talk on the construction of the organ, followed by a demonstration of the several stops, ending with two Bach chorales and the Prelude and Fugue in C minor, Book 4, Peters Edition. This program was played Wednesday afternoon, Sept. 23, at 3 o'clock, in the First Methodist Church in Oak Park.

E. WILLIAM BRACKETT

AT BOCA RATON FIELD, FLA.

Private E. William Brackett, concert organist from Washington, D. C., who has played recitals throughout the East and Middle West, is now stationed at Boca Raton Field, Fla., one of the army air force's technical schools, where he will serve as chaplain's assistant and post organist.

Just prior to joining the army Private Brackett was accompanist for the National Cathedral Choral Society and accompanied the chorus in its recent presentation of Verdi's Requiem. In the summer of 1941 Mr. Brackett was one of the recitalists at the national convention of the American Guild of Organists, held in Washington. For the last two years he has been a student in organ and theory under Dr. T. Tertius Noble of St. Thomas' Church, New York City.

Private Brackett began his musical career as a student at Peabody Conservatory of Music, where he was graduated in 1935 with a bachelor of music degree. At the same time that he was attending Peabody he studied languages at Johns Hopkins University in the evenings and served as assistant organist at the Church of St. Michael and All Angels in Baltimore. After graduation he was organist and choirmaster of St. John's Church, Georgetown, where he directed the choir of men and boys. St. John's is the oldest church edifice in the District of Columbia.

For five summers Mr. Brackett served as organist at the National Cathedral in Washington and played recitals in that city.

Private Brackett is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Brackett of Minneapolis.

New Position for Hester Smithey.

Hester Smithey has resigned as organist of the National City Christian Church, Washington, D. C., which she served for six years, and has accepted the post of organist and director of choirs at Grace Episcopal Church, Woodside, Md., in suburban Washington. At Grace Church Mrs. Smithey will direct the adult choir, a junior choir and a boys' choir. She holds degrees in music and is treasurer of the District of Columbia Chapter, American Guild of Organists.

New England Choir Directors to Meet.

The first meeting of the New England Choir Directors' Guild will be held Tuesday evening, Oct. 6, at Boston University. The speaker, Dr. Archibald T. Davison, professor of choral music at Harvard University, will speak on choral work. He has been a member of the Harvard faculty for over thirty years. Harris S. The
ORGOBLO

AS A FAN

The Orgoblo is like an enclosed fan. Light-weight impellers are mounted on an oversized motor shaft which has only two bearings. There are no belts or gears. Note the curved stationary vanes that direct the air—another exclusive Spencer feature that insures smooth flow and high efficiencies without surges at all loads.

It's all steel, compact and requires no special foundation. Operates efficiently at all loads without vibration or disturbing noise.

Wide clearances, low peripheral speeds, extra large shafts, and built like a bridge—with all metal, rust resistant and reinforced construction—the Orgoblo gives satisfactory service for a lifetime.

JOHN HUSTON STATIONED AT CAMP WOLTERS, IN TEXAS

John Huston of Dallas, Tex., entered the army Aug. 6 and has been stationed permanently with the medical detachment in the infirmary at the reception center at Camp Wolters, Tex. He is one of three organists at the reception center who play at the Sunday services and give an organ meditation every evening. The latter is growing rapidly in popularity, especially with the hospital patients.

Mr. Huston studied with the late Hugh McAmis in New York last summer before being called into the service. He has obtained leave of absence from the Highland Park Methodist Church and Temple Emanu-El of Dallas and has persuaded his first organ teacher, Mrs. H. M. Whaling, Jr., formerly at Southern Methodist University, to take his place for the duration.

Mr. Craighead, who has been organist at the California church for one and one-half years, departed for Philadelphia Aug. 31.

FRANK ASPER WILL TEACH IN MEXICO NEXT SUMMER

Dr. Frank Asper, organist of the Salt Lake City Tabernacle, has been appointed to the faculty of the 1943 summer school of Mexico's National Conservatory of Music as the result of the series of recitals which he gave in Mexico in August. Dr. Asper, accompanied by Mrs. Asper, went to Mexico at the invitation of the Society of Chamber Music and immediately won the admiration of Mexico's music-loving public.

Before going home Dr. Asper gave a recital in the Church of Our Lady of Guadalupe, Mexico City, with the Lener Quartet. The program included Bach's D minor Concerto for organ and two violins, Vivaldi's E minor Sonata for organ and 'cello and the lento movement from Cesar Franck's F minor Quintet, in addition to several organ selections.

TRIBUTE TO MRS. REDIC BY CHURCH ON ANNIVERSARY

Mrs. Cora Conn Redic, organist of the First Presbyterian Church of Winfield, Kan., for the last twenty-four years, was paid a tribute at the service Sept. 20 for her faithful work. Members of the choir presented her with a corsage of gardenias. Preceding the offertory she was called to the chancel and Dr. Jackson, the pastor, praised Mrs. Redic for her faithfulness, her loyalty and her interest in the church, and gave expression to his appreciation of the music in the service. At this time she was presented with a basket of red roses.

New Treasury Ruling Permits Purchases UP TO $100,000
In Any Calendar Year of Series F and G WAR BONDS!

This is not a new Bond issue and not a new series of War Bonds. Thousands of individuals, corporations, labor unions, and other organizations have this year already purchased $50,000 of Series F and G Bonds, the old limit. Under the new regulations, however, these Bond holders will be permitted to make additional purchases of $50,000 in the remaining months of the year. The new limitation on holdings of $100,000 in any one calendar year in either Series F or G, or in both series combined, is on the cost price; not on the maturity value.

Series F and G Bonds are intended primarily for larger investors and may be registered in the names of fiduciaries, corporations, labor unions, and other groups, as well as individuals.

The Series F Bond is a 12-year appreciation Bond, issued on a discount basis at 74 percent of maturity value. If held to maturity, 12 years from the date of issue, the Bond draws interest equivalent to 2.53 percent a year, computed on the purchase price, compounded semiannually. The Series G Bond is a 12-year current income Bond issued at par, and draws interest of 2.5 percent a year, paid semiannually by Treasury check.
